FOREWORD
BY
EDMUND JANES JAMES

To the Students, Past and Present, of the University of Illinois—

GREETINGS:

You are a great army, more than thirty thousand strong, scattered over the whole surface of the earth, in every country and under every clime. The role is contained in the pages of this book. It is a long and honorable one and you may well be proud that your name is in the list.

No one could have anticipated in 1868 that such an institution as this has become would be the result of less than fifty years' growth. Not even Doctor Gregory, the first president, that man of wondrous vision and power, who saw by faith the ultimate outcome, would have dared to expect such an achievement so soon.

The grain of mustard seed planted by the Bone Yard stream in 1867 has indeed become a great tree. When the ground first parted and the bud of promise appeared on that famous eleventh of March, 1868, when the University was opened, two professors and a head farmer, and two non-resident lecturers made up the faculty, and fifty-seven pupils the student body. The former has grown to over 600, (in the present year,—1916,) the latter to 6,500.

It is truly the Lord's doing and marvelous in our eyes.

It is also plain that we have only just begun our real growth as a world university, and the next fifty years will see as remarkable changes as have the last fifty.

If we can only grow in truth and grace at the same rate as in numbers and resources!

Everyone who has been privileged to contribute to its growth, either as student, member of the faculty, trustee, member of the legislature, governor of the state, or tax-payer and benefactor, may well be proud of the opportunity to be a part of such an institution.

We shall be able to wax great and strong just in proportion as through our alumni and faculties we can extend and deepen our service to our day and generation.

You can each of you help us who are in immediate charge of the University to measure up to our responsibilities, not only by performing your own services ever more fully to your fellowmen directly about you, but also by helping the University itself do its great work in a more nearly perfect way:—

1. By keeping the University and its work on your mind and in your heart, informing yourself as to what it is doing and then thinking and talking about its achievements to others, thus helping to "create an atmosphere."

2. By visiting the institution as often as you can, especially on great days like Commencement, thus renewing your own youth and increasing your enthusiasm and stimulating that of your fellow alumni.

3. By turning in our direction the best youth of your acquaintance to swell the student body, for our service to humanity will depend in the long run largely, perhaps more than on any other one thing, on the brains and character of our alumni.

4. By contributing of your means, large or small, to the support of the institution. We need twice as much money as we have or, so far as one can see, are likely to get in the near future from the Legislature. We can use pennies and dollars and thousands of dollars and hundreds of thousands. An alumnus sent us not long ago a pamphlet for which he had paid ten cents, and which filled up a serious gap in the files of an important publication. A former trustee gave us the other day seven hundred acres of land to provide a fund for erecting a music building. If you have a dollar or a million dollars to give away let us tell you for what we need it most. If you have a rare book or a valuable print or coin or a beautiful picture which you wish to place where it will do the most good, give it to the University library or museum.

5. By calling the attention of other public-spirited citizens, whether or not they be former students of the University of Illinois, to the opportunity of erecting here upon this campus memorials in the form of buildings or collections, in honor of wife or husband or children, which will bear the name of a loved one on into the flowing years, as long as our civilization shall endure, for this University is already one of the great institutions of learning in this country, and is destined to be recognized ere long as one of the great historic centers of sweetness and light of all time and all countries. Urbana-Champaign will ultimately be ranked with Bologna and Prague and Leipzig and Halle and Berlin and Paris and Vienna and Leiden and Oxford and Cambridge and Edinburgh as a home of all that makes for the advancement of the human spirit.

Come up and help us realize this in our day and generation!

6. By helping to present in person or by letter to members of the Legislature and to the press and voters of the state the claims of the University to an ever-larger support, based upon an ever-increasing service to the Commonwealth.

To sum it up, keep alive and quick your own personal interest in this great undertaking. Do not let your interest evaporate in futile wishes for the prosperity of Alma Mater, but make it real by doing something, no matter how small, for her welfare and prosperity.

Faithfully yours,

EDMUND JANES JAMES.

THE UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS DIRECTORY

PREFACE

The Trustees of the University of Illinois have authorized the printing of this edition of the University of Illinois Directory. It has taken much more time and work and involved much more expense than was anticipated at the beginning. In order to secure accurate and comprehensive information the original plan for the Directory was modified. The names of students in the Academy, 5080 in number, were added, in order to include in the Directory the names of all persons who have ever been associated with the Urbana-Champaign departments. Data at hand have been carefully checked and verified in so far as possible. The University registration cards have been double checked and re-checked with the annual registers, and supplemented by names of persons omitted where reliable information has been obtained.

In sending communications to former students it has been necessary to use their last addresses while students at the University. During the past year cards of information have been sent to all academy students, former faculty members, administrative officers, and trustees. Return postal cards have been sent to persons about whom the information was incomplete within the last three months. In order to locate lost students, complete "lost" lists, arranged by four-year periods, have at two different times been mailed to all former students. City clerks have been called upon for information. City papers have been appealed to, and several present fáculty members who have been connected with the University for the last thirty years or more have gone over the complete lost lists and at least part of the manuscript. In addition, proof of the book has been posted in the different colleges of the University and sent to some of the leading alumni organizations. Every former student has received at least four communications in which he has been urged to keep the University informed of any change in his address.

The book is doubtless full of errors. The editor of the 1913 University of Illinois Directory estimated the errors in that publication at a maximum of ten million. With six times as many names in the present publication, we do not even venture to estimate the number of mistakes. It has been impossible to secure any information at all about some persons other than that contained in their record of admission or dismissal from the University, and even the present addresses of two former trustees have not been secured, although we have published requests for information about them in the local papers where they last lived. Communications have been sent to the friends of lost persons who were at the University at the same time as they. Many former students who might have supplied data about themselves or their friends have ignored repeated requests to do so. In some cases, therefore, the information given in this book is limited to the entries in the official records of the University, supplemented by whatever information might be available.

Many mistakes are inexcusable and ridiculous, such as that which appeared in the record of a distinguished professor and dean of a neighboring institution: "Nothing is known of his career subsequent to graduation from college or his present whereabouts," although he occupied at the time of the publication of the Directory an office next to that of the editor of the Directory.

It has been impossible in many instances to decipher the chirography or to identify and classify occupations clearly. Some persons still alive we, or a local postmaster, have relegated to their final reward, and some long dead we have compelled to prolong their mundane existence. We have preferred, however, to record as lost all persons about whom we have not secured positive information, even when a postmaster has stamped "Deceased" on the returned letters.

Regarding these blunders we can only cry "Peccavi, peccavi," reiterate that we have done the best we could, and beg the pardon of all persons misrecorded. Any special merit of the book is due to the interest and constant encouragement of President James, to the co-operation of many Illini who have desired to perpetuate accurate facts about the University and to the alertness of the young women who have assisted in the preparation of the book.

Time and tide will test our work. In the meantime we earnestly request that every person who detects a blunder will kindly forward the fact to the President's Office, where the information will be recorded in our permanent card file. In this way only can we hope to eliminate the errors from subsequent editions.

The Directory contains the names of the thirty-five thousand persons who have been connected with the Champaign-Urbana departments. Such officers of administration are included as are listed in the Annual Registers. The Colleges of Medicine and Dentistry and the School of Pharmacy in Chicago, with a former student body of about ten thousand, have been omitted but will appear in a proposed Directory for the Chicago departments.

The information about each person includes his full name as recorded at registration; years of attendance at the University; degrees received; institutions attended; occupation and present address. A residence address or a permanent address at which the person can always be reached is recorded in parentheses following the business or present address. The principal positions held by faculty members have been specified. There is a cross file of married names and of men's names that have been altered since leaving the University although the registration name also has always been given.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF THE
UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS

The germ from which the University of Illinois has developed may be found in the clause of the famous ordinance of 1787, "Religion, morality and knowledge, being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged."

This provision, a half century before the appearance of our public school system and seventy-five years before the Land Grant Act of 1862 providing for state universities was merely the ideal from which ideas might continually arise until suddenly a complete state educational system emerged in our national life. It was well into the fifties before public schools began to spread in Illinois and even in the eighties high schools were regarded as questionable necessities. President James relates that when he was principal of the high school at Evanston, Illinois in 1878 that the question was presented annually to the voters of this period, not whether the principal or superintendent of schools should leave, but whether the people of a given locality desired to continue their high school.

However higher education was provided for as early as 1804, when Congress made three districts in Indiana Territory and directed the Secretary of the Treasury to locate one township of land in each district for the use of a seminary of learning. At this time Illinois belonged to Indiana Territory. Later, in 1818, when Illinois became a state, a second township was given for the endowment of a seminary, and also one-sixth of 3% of the net proceeds of government lands sold after January 1, 1819.[1] This latter donation to the state was to be "exclusively bestowed upon a college or university."

The people of Illinois, however, made no attempt to establish an institution of learning with these funds as a foundation until 1833. In that year a bill was introduced to incorporate an institution to be called "Illinois University." The bill met with strong opposition, as Springfield was named for the location. Through jealousy, Vandalia stirred up the opposition of other neighboring cities. Friends of the infant colleges of McKendree, Shurtleff, and Illinois looked with alarm upon the establishment of such a state-endowed university; and, in addition, the men in control of state affairs, in order to avoid taxation, had already used all moneys received for the college fund and from the sale of the seminary lands for the current expenses of the government. And any proposition to cut off the use, in a similar way, of further receipts from the same source was decidedly unpopular. Furthermore, they would have had to resort to taxation in order to restore the trust funds already misappropriated. Fortunately perhaps for them, the bill met with defeat, and for several years after this the efforts made to establish a state institution of higher learning were wholly unorganized. The people took little interest in the matter and attempts were even made from time to time to divide up the college and seminary funds among the colleges of the state.[1]

Again, in 1851, the senate passed "An Act to Establish a State University," but upon re-consideration the bill was laid upon the table. An examination of this bill shows that the proposed university was to be a board of men to distribute the income of the college and seminary funds to the several colleges of the state, upon conditions named, for the purpose of educating teachers for the common schools.

After this failure, however, a movement arose to establish an institution of a rather different character. The Buel Institute, an agricultural society of Putnam County, at its fair in September, determined to hold a farmers' convention at Granville in November "to take into consideration such measures as might be deemed expedient to further the interests of the agricultural community, and particularly to take steps toward the establishment of an agricultural university." Professor Jonathan Baldwin Turner of Jacksonville was invited to be present and address the convention. The attitude of the leaders of this convention toward higher education and what they sought to obtain through their proposed university may be shown by quoting the resolutions presented by a committee, of which Professor Turner was chairman.

"RESOLVED, That we greatly rejoice in the degree of perfection to which our various institutions for the education of our brethren engaged in professional, scientific, and literary pursuits, have already attained, and in the mental and moral elevation which those institutions have given them, and in their consequent preparation and capacity for the great duties in the spheres of life in which they are engaged; and that we will aid, in all ways consistent, for the still greater perfection of such institutions.

"RESOLVED, That, as the representatives of the industrial classes, including all cultivators of the soil, artisans, mechanics, and merchants, we desire the same privileges and advantages for ourselves, our fellows, and our posterity in each of the several callings, as our professional brethren enjoy in theirs; and we admit that it is our own fault that we do not also enjoy them.

"RESOLVED, That, in our opinion, the institutions originally and primarily designed to meet the wants of the professional classes, as such, cannot, in the nature of things, meet ours, no more than the institutions we desire to establish for ourselves could meet theirs. Therefore,

"RESOLVED, That we take immediate measures for the establishment of a university in the State of Illinois expressly to meet those felt wants of each and all the industrial classes of our State; that we recommend the foundation of High Schools, Lyceums, Institutes, etc., in each of our counties, on similar principles, so soon as they may find it practicable so to do.

"RESOLVED, That, in our opinion, such institutions can never impede, but must greatly promote, the best interests of all those existing institutions."

The prominence which this convention holds may be attributed largely to the bold and vigorous way in which Professor Turner discussed the questions, "What do the industrial classes want" and "How can that want be supplied." His answer to the first question was, "They want, and they ought to have, the same facilities for understanding the true philosophy—the science and the art of their several pursuits, their life business—and of efficiently applying existing knowledge thereto and widening its domain, which the professional classes have long enjoyed in their pursuits.'' Replying to the second question, his belief was that the want neither could, nor should, be supplied by existing institutions which were designed to educate the professional classes, and whose spirit was literary and intellectual as distinguished from the industrial and practical. He said the need was for a ''university for the industrial classes in each of the states'' and presented his ''plan for the state university.''

This plan was quite elaborate. It was insisted upon that such a university would, of right, receive the college or university fund which the state held from the general government, and it was doubtless intended to claim also the seminary fund, though this is not stated distinctly.

The address greatly aroused the convention, a report of which, including the address in full, was published and widely circulated. The Report of the Illinois State Board of Agriculture and the United States Patent office report of 1851 reproduced it; the New York Tribune and the New York Horticulturist noticed it with approval; the attention of the National Agricultural Association was called to it; the Philadelphia North American gave it editorial approval; etc., etc.[1] Acceding to the request of the convention, the Governor, in summoning an extra session of the legislature to meete June 7, 1852, laid before that body the subject of industrial education as presented at the Granville meeting.

At a second convention, held at Springfield, June 8, 1852, representatives and friends of some of the colleges attended and claimed that their institutions, rather than the proposed new university, legitimately should receive the college fund. They made a bid for the seminary fund, agreeing to establish teachers' departments if it were bestowed upon them. A discussion, sharp and angry, took place and the quarrel was transferred to the legislature. The convention presented its land grant memorial and enlarged the plan for a university by adding a normal school, to be coordinate with the industrial department,[2] in order to meet the demand that the seminary fund be used in training teachers for the common schools. The convention also urged in its memorial that a beginning be made at once to carry into effect either the original plan or some modification of it which the General Assembly might think preferable, ''and if possible, on a sufficiently extensive scale honorably to justify a successful appeal to congress in conjunction with eminent citizens and statesmen in other states, who have expressed their readiness to co-operate with us for an appropriation of public lands in each state in the Union for the appropriate endowment of universities for the liberal education of the industrial classes in their several pursuits in each state in the Union.''

In the legislature, the House referred the whole subject to its committee on education, and the college men won at first by securing from it a bill to divide both funds among the existing colleges. But the result was a drawn battle; for the bill was laid upon the table, and as if to be rid of a troublesome contest, both Houses joined in a resolution asking authority from Congress to add both the college and seminary funds to the common school fund, so that the income from them might be forever given to the support of the public schools.

A third convention was held in Chicago in November, 1852, at which the Industrial League of the State of Illinois, with Professor Turner for chief director, was organized,—the purpose being to promote the interests of the industrial classes. This convention published an address to the people of the state, prepared a memorial to the Legislature, and arranged for petitions both to the legislature and to Congress.

At a fourth convention held in Springfield, January 4, 1853, again the request for an industrial university was set forth and the legislature was urged to memorialize Congress, asking for each state an appropriation of public lands, of a value not less than $500,000 for the liberal endowment of an industrial university.

In 1854 Governor Matteson proposed the subject of industrial education to the legislature for consideration at its special session. In the following January, 1855, the Industrial League held a fifth convention in Springfield and a bill was introduced in the legislature for "An Act to Incorporate the Trustees of the Illinois University." The trustees were to locate the university and to receive from the state the college and seminary funds for its endowment, on condition that they raised a like amount from other sources. They were also to receive any grants which Congress might make for industrial education. The plan of the proposed institution was broad and liberal as it appears in the bill, which did not, however, obtain any definite action from either House.

There was little apparent sympathy in Congress with this subject, which was arousing such widespread interest, perhaps due to the fact that in 1854 President Pierce had vetoed a bill proposing land grants to the states for establishing asylums for the indigent insane, and in this veto had used language which showed clearly that his action would be the same toward a bill providing land grants to the states for colleges of agriculture and science.

With the coming of a new president in 1857, friends of industrial education again bestirred themselves, and their measure was House Bill No. 2 introduced by Justin S. Morrill of Vermont, a man from one of the older states that had not thus far benefited by the land grant of the federal government. It met with strong opposition, and the bill was finally defeated at the hands of President Buchanan who interposed his veto, largely upon constitutional grounds,[1] and it was considered useless to seek for further action by Congress while Buchanan was president. The bill provided for a grant to the several states of 20,000 acres for each member of Congress from the state, according to the apportionment to be made after the census of 1860. The states were to establish within five years not less than one college, where the leading object should be to teach agriculture and the mechanic arts, without the exclusion of other scientific and classical studies.

Again early in December, 1861, Mr. Morrill renewed the agitation in favor of a national grant of land to each state in the Union for the promotion of education in agriculture and the mechanic arts, and secured the passage of the so-called Morrill bill by both houses. It was approved by President Lincoln July 2, 1862. The act was substantially the same as the previous bill. The chief differences were a grant of 30,000 acres of land for each member of Congress instead of 20,000; the exclusion of states in rebellion; and the requirements of acceptance by the states within two years instead of five, and that instruction be given in military science. The grant was to constitute a perpetual fund, the income of which was to be "inviolably appropriated" by the state "to the endowment, support, and maintenance of, at least, one college, where the leading object shall be, without excluding other scientific and classical studies, and including military tactics, to teach such branches of learning as are related to agriculture and the mechanic arts, in such manner as the legislatures of the states may respectively prescribe in order to promote the liberal and practical education of the industrial classes in the several pursuits and professions of life.''[1]

The results of this movement may reasonably be looked upon with satisfaction and pride, and great honor is surely due to Professor Turner. In a study by President James entitled ''The Origin of the Land Grant Act of 1862'' may be found conclusive evidence that to ''Jonathan B. Turner, the Illinois professor and farmer, belongs the credit of having first formulated clearly the plan of a national grant of land to each state in the Union for the promotion of education in agriculture and mechanic arts, and of having inaugurated the agitation that made possible the passage of the so-called Morrill Act. To his memory should be raised a monument in each of the sixty-eight institutions which have grown out of his effort or whose power and usefulness have been increased by these appropriations.''

It is well within the rules of propriety that Illinoisans congratulate themselves that the movement so full of good to the nation, to labor, and to youth everywhere, had its inception here in Illinois; that from Illinois came the demand upon the federal government; that to an Illinois senator is due the first movement in its favor in Congress; and that an Illinois president gave it life by affixing his signature.

On February 14, 1863, the legislature formally accepted the provisions made by Congress and in due time the land scrip for the 480,000 acres, to which Illinois was entitled, was sent to the governor.

But even after the passage of the bill there was much controversy over the funds thus made available for educational purposes. Some wished to divide the fund among several agricultural colleges; while others preferred one college and favored having it made a part of an already existing institution. Questions of this nature caused much bitter strife. Those who had struggled for the passage of this bill had sought to establish one institution and to make it unlike the existing colleges of the state, and entirely separate from them. Naturally, they deprecated any attempt to divide the fund or to use it in establishing departments in existing colleges. The views of this party were embodied in a bill, drafted by a committee of which Jonathan B. Turner was chairman, and substantially similar to the charter finally granted in 1867. Resolutions were adopted by the State Agricultural and the State Horticultural Societies insisting upon one institution, and opposing an effort to divide the fund, or to use it in establishing departments in existing colleges. They proposed that the location should be made, after the consideration of bids, at that place which seemed to offer the greatest facilities.

The General Assembly of 1867 passed a bill giving any county, city, township, or incorporated town, power to vote bonds and to make proposals for securing the location of the University. The people of Champaign were early alert to the idea of securing the institution and put forth every effort to obtain the prize. Nor were the opposing counties by any means idle. In their efforts to defeat this county, the latter sent out warnings and appeals through circulars and newspaper articles to the people of the state, in which ridicule and derision of the claims of Champaign County formed the burden. The seminary property, a large brick building which formed a part of the offer of Champaign County, received the label ''The Champaign Elephant,''[1] and this epithet was well kept before the people of the state; certain Chicago papers lending ready and nimble hands in the propagation of this and other like derogatory attacks. Champaign County, on the other hand, lost no opportunity to gain influence and to make friends for its cause. After a not altogether creditable contest among the several competing counties—Champaign, Logan, McLean, and Morgan,—the legislature accepted the offer of Champaign County, and, subject to certain conditions, located the University at Urbana.

Governor Oglesby approved the act incorporating the Illinois Industrial University, February 28th, 1867. This act provided that five trustees were to be appointed from each of the three grand judicial districts of the state, and one trustee from each of the thirteen congressional districts, who with the governor, superintendent of public instruction, president of the State Agricultural Society, and the Regent, when elected, as ex-officio members, should constitute the Board of Trustees. In pursuance of the law, the Board met for the first time in the Representatives Hall in Springfield on March 12th, 1867. Governor Oglesby, the temporary president of the Board, prescribed the oath to each member, according to the constitution of 1848, then in force. This oath, among other things, solemnly pledged each man not to engage in dueling during his term of office, and declared that each had not been guilty of dueling since the adoption of that constitution.

Under the law, the first business to be transacted was the election of the Regent, or President, of the University. The Board chose Reverend John Milton Gregory, a man of broad and enlightened views, who at the time was President of Kalamazoo College, Michigan.

Therefore as the act provided that one-third should serve for a term of two years, one-third for a term of four years, and one-third for a term of six years,[2] the trustees drew for their terms of office. At the first meeting the Board also passed the following resolution:

''Resolved, That sensible of our dependence on the Divine blessing in the great work in which we are engaged it should be a standing order of this Board to commence each day's proceedings by the Word of God and Prayer.'' The motion carried unanimously.[3]

The new Board of Trustees, including Regent Gregory, was largely chosen from the laity and clergy of the Baptist church, and for some time fear was entertained that the new university would become largely a denominational school.[3] However, the first fear was groundless, as the bias in the actions of the Board, which many looked for, did not appear, and in Dr. Gregory's long administration it would be difficult to point out anything in his action tending in that direction, and the second fear was refuted by the daily compulsory chapel service and Sunday afternoon Vesper services at which Dr. Gregory preached.

His acceptance of the position as Regent of the University did not occur until after he had made a trip to Chicago and Champaign. He said that in both these places only one opinion was expressed to him, and that was, that this new institution

[1]Jonathan Stoughton had promoted the erection of this building which was financed by the sale of adjoining lots. The building was to be used for a higher institution of learning. The Civil War interfered with the scheme but there is little doubt that if the building had not been already in existence that the Legislature would never have voted to locate the institution in Urbana-Champaign. Clark R. Griggs was largely instrumental in securing the University, since he travelled over the entire state before the legislature met and sacrified the Speakership of the House for the chairmanship of the committee on the location of the University. He skillfully manoeuvered the vote for the rival communities first and then when all were voted down there was nothing left but to locate the institution in Urbana.

was to be "the grandest university on the American continent." He accepted the election and become the first Regent, of what was then the Illinois Industrial University, serving as its executive head from April 1, 1867, a year before the institution was formally opened, until 1880.

John Milton Gregory was born at Sand Lake, New York, July 6, 1822. He was a graduate of Union College, and a pupil of Eliphalet Nott, one of the greatest educators of his day. He studied law from 1836 to 1848, and later, after some time spent in the study of theology, he entered the Baptist ministry. For a time he taught in a secondary school in Michigan, and in 1858 was elected State Superintendent of Public Instruction of that state. He held this position until 1863, when he was elected to the presidency of Kalamazoo College. After serving this College four years, he entered upon the duties of Regent of the University.

Dr. Gregory was a man of high ideals and broad sympathies, with great vigor and considerable oratorical ability and his general plan of university organization has continued to the present day. His personal influence upon the student body was marked. His vision of what an institution such as a State University should be was far reaching.

During the year following his election to the regency, and previous to the opening of the University, not only were the plans for the institution pushed forward at the seat of the proposed university, but Dr. Gregory also travelled the state, seeking to interest young men everywhere in securing a higher education. Many of the addresses which he made were delivered from the rear end of a farmer's wagon at a county fair. To many young men who afterwards came to the University and who have since been of great value to their state, the appeal came from the lips of this college president on some such occasion.[1]

One of the first great tasks of Dr. Gregory was to prepare an outline of the general aims of the new university, and a course of study. This he did, as chairman of a committee appointed by the Board. The following departments and courses of study were suggested to be developed as soon as practicable.

I. The Agricultural Department, embracing—
   1. The course in Agriculture proper
   2. The course in Horticulture and Landscape Gardening
II. The Polytechnic Department, embracing—
   1. The course in Mechanical Science and Art
   2. The course in Civil Engineering
   3. The course in Mining and Metallurgy
   4. The course in Architecture and Fine Arts
III. The Military Department, embracing—
   1. The course in Military Engineering
   2. The course in Tactics
IV. The Department of Chemistry and Natural Science
V. The Department of Trade and Commerce
VI. The Department of General Science and Literature, embracing—
   1. The course in Mathematics
   2. The course in National History, Chemistry, etc.

[1]Alumni Quarterly, V. IV, Makers of the University, by Henry Mahan Beardsley, '79, p. 5.

3. The course in English Language and Literature
4. The course in Modern Language and Literature
5. The course in Ancient Language and Literature
6. The course in History and Social Science
7. The course in Philosophy, Intellectual and Moral[1]

The report of this course of study committee caused considerable excitement among the people. The idea of teaching "English Literature" and "Ancient and Modern Languages and Literatures," proved as the red flag to the infuriated bull of the story. The institution was denounced as no more than one of the "old colleges" and the question was derisively asked, "Why add, by a public grant of lands, to these old institutions, of which the people already have too many?" It is probably due to the warfare aroused by this course of study that only 57 were enrolled at the opening of the University on March 11, 1868, and of these, 45 were from Champaign County. Untrue and sensational tales were told and believed, greatly to the discredit of the new University. Many demanded that the classics should be excluded from the course of study; others that they should be tolerated, but not cherished. By some it was claimed that the students of belle-lettres would constitute an aristocratic class in that institution and that the students of agriculture and mechanic arts would be looked upon as inferiors. The dissatisfaction showed itself in newspaper articles and in public addresses. Dissensions took place in the Board of Trustees. Finally, in 1870, a convention of delegates from the several county agricultural societies met at Bloomington to consider the past, present, and future condition of the Illinois Industrial University. Dr. Gregory attended this convention and delivered an address. He explained at length the act creating the University and the course of study, answered some reasonable questions, and as a result very much improved the existing feeling. They appointed a committee to visit and investigate the institution and report thereon. This committee's report served greatly to strengthen the University.[2]

The subjects actually taught at the opening of the University were algebra, geometry, natural philosophy, history, rhetoric, and Latin, and the work was carried on in the brick building which was the donation of Champaign County. This building also served as a dormitory and came to be known as the Old Dormitory building.

Owing to the belief that it is the separation of the theoretical and practical which renders so much education mere "book learning," the Board of Trustees decided that a manual labor system should be thoroughly tried, and all students, not excused for physical disability, were required to labor from one to three hours a day. The students went out in squads, under their military officers, and under the general supervision of members of the faculty. The maximum compensation of such labor was eight cents an hour. Many students worked voluntarily over hours, and received for such over-work twelve and a half cents an hour. In a short time, however, labor was made wholly voluntary, except as it was a part of some course of study, as the shop practice in the course of mechanical science and art.

In matters of discipline Dr. Gregory believed in treating the students as men, and in appealing to their manhood for the maintenance of good order. His love of freedom showed itself in the establishment of the Student's Government system, first tried in 1870. By permission of the faculty, the general assembly of the students was organized, and a constitution adopting providing for the election of a president, vice-president, secretary, and marshal. There was also a senate of 21 members and a court, consisting of a chief justice and two associate judges. Under this constitution, the senate enacted laws, which became valid only when approved by the Regent of the University. All offenses against these laws were tried before the students' court, and punished by fines according to the claims of offence. Cases requiring the severer penalties of suspension or expulsion from the University were referred to the faculty, and students refusing to pay the fines imposed by the students' government were suspended from University privileges. For a time this system of government worked admirably, but later politics crept in and perverted justice, and the system was abandoned in 1883.

The faculty for the first term consisted of the Regent, two instructors, a head farmer, and two non-resident lecturers. A decided contrast in numbers with our faculty of today! The two towns likewise presented a very different appearance. Street pavements were laid some twenty years later than this; the buildings, for the most part, were of the cheaper grade of scantling frames; and the streets themselves were more often adorned by wood piles than by sidewalks. Stock of all kinds ran at large in both towns and in the country, so that all houses were securely fenced to keep out the predatory town cows and hogs.

Women were not at first admitted to the University. In 1869 the question of their admission was raised, and after a lengthy discussion, upon the motion of Mr. John S. Johnson,[2] it was settled in the affirmative in March, 1870. The story is told that a group of boys, much interested in the outcome of the discussion, listened to the deliberations of the trustees through a friendly stove-pipe hole, and when the vote was finally taken, and announced as favorable to the young women, an approving shout was heard from the gallant fellows above.[3] Girls ever since have been thus kindly received, and their presence has come to be viewed as a matter of course. In the first year, twenty-two were registered; while during the year 1915-16, their attendance has increased to 1,535, out of the total number of 6,298, or nearly one-fifth of the whole enrollment of the University of Illinois. Thus their early kindly reception seems to have been appreciated.

In spite of the prominence of agriculture in the state and the important part which the farmers took in the industrial movement, the agricultural department languished. The proportion of agricultural students during the first decade was insignificant.

Meanwhile the engineering courses developed rapidly. Stillman W. Robinson, elected to the professorship of Mechanical Engineering in 1869, may be regarded as the real founder of the College of Engineering. He appreciated the educational possibilities of shop work and made it a part of the engineering instruction. In January, 1870, a mechanical shop was fitted up with tools and machinery. Dr. Peabody, in speaking of it, says, "It is probable that tool or machine instruction was first given in America at the Worcester Free Institute, which was formally inaugurated in November, 1868, six months after the inauguration of this University. I have not been able to find that Professor Robinson's practice shop had any other predecessor in this country." In the summer of 1871 the mechanical building and drill hall (burned on June 9, 1909) were erected and equipped for students' shop work in both wood and iron, and for military drill.

The legislature, in its session the same year, authorized the construction of the main University building, according to the plans and estimates, laid before it, at a cost of $150,000. They appropriated $75,000, and provided that the $75,000 additional should be appropriated at the next meeting. Work on the building was commenced, but the legislature failed to make the expected additional appropriation. A broad, white streak on the west wall remains the indelible record of the time when the work could go no further. It was deemed advisable to provide temporarily for the continuance of the work by the sale of the Champaign County bonds. This was done, and the work was resumed. Every effort was made that this money should be repaid by the State, but such efforts were unavailing. The building was finished and dedicated December 10, 1873.[1]

The other of the larger buildings erected during this period was the Chemical Laboratory, which was authorized by the legislature of 1877 and dedicated at the commencement in 1878. Its cost, when fitted and furnished, was $40,000. There were other smaller appropriations made during the period, which were used in the construction of a house and barn on the horticultural grounds, a gardener's house, a greenhouse, and a barn for the agricultural department.

A re-organization of the Board of Trustees occurred in 1873. The number of members was reduced from 31 to 11—the Goveror and the President of the State Board of Agriculture, ex officio, and nine others, who were still appointed by the Governor.[2] Beginning at this time also, the President of the Board was chosen by the members from among their own number for a term of one year. At the meeting held July 10, 1873, Emory Cobb was elected the new president. He gave much time and attention to the affairs of the University for more than a quarter of a century.

At the end of the first five years the organization of the University consisted of four colleges—the College of Agriculture, of Engineering, of Natural Science, and of Literature and Science. These were sub-divided as follows:

The College of Agriculture embraced the Schools of Agriculture and Horticulture.

The College of Engineering included the four Schools of Mechanical, Civil, and Mining Engineering and Architecture.

The College of Natural Science included the School of Chemistry and the School of Natural History.

The College of Literature and Arts and Science embraced the School of Modern Language and Literature and the School of Ancient Language and Literature.

Besides these, there were the Schools of Commercial Science, the School of Military Science, and a School of Domestic Economy. The instruction in the last named school began with the college year 1872-'73. The full course in the beginning embraced general literary work while in the second and third years lectures on topics of domestic economy took the place of the mathematical studies. This was the first School of Domestic Economy of high grade, and with a complete course, organized in the United States, if not the first in the world.

Admission requirements at first were very low in all departments; but fewer than half the student of the earlier years were able to meet them, and members of the faculty found themselves overloaded with elementary work to the detriment of higher instruction. In accordance with Dr. Gregory's views, the entrance requirements were gradually advanced, and in 1875 a preparatory year was instituted which later developed into the Academy. Candidates in the preparatory classes had to be fifteen years of age and be able to pass satisfactory examinations in arithmetic, geography,

English grammar, and United State history. Like other institutions of the Middle West, Illinois, after some experiments, adopted the "accredited school" system. The first school so accredited was the Princeton High School, and by 1880 the number had increased to twenty-two.[1]

In the early days of the institution, the elective system predominated. Although liberty had its risks, it was "not thought useful or right to attempt to urge every student, without regard to his capacity, tastes, or practical wants, to take some lengthened curriculum.[2] But gradually this system of complete freedom was modified, and students who desired to "graduate," were required to complete some one of the courses outlined in the catalog. The introduction of academic degrees at the commencement in 1878 strengthend this tendency. Distinct courses were then defined, to each of which a degree was given.

According to the original state law, the usual diplomas and degrees could not be given by the University. Certificates showing the studies pursued and the attainments in each were given instead. But this was a new dispensation which the great world was unwilling to accept. The graduates found their paper not current in the market. The name of the institution was persistently misinterpreted. The Regent had to be at all times prepared to show that he was not only a trustee of the people but also their servant. It is a matter of record that when the earlier professors went to the State Teachers' Association and sought admission to the college section, it was denied them because an institution that gave no degrees had no rightful claim to call itself a college.[3]

In 1877 the alumni petitioned the legislature to give the University authority to grant degrees. The authority was given, and a fee of $5.00 required for each diploma.[4] Graduation with a certificate was still permitted to those who had obtained the requisite number of term credits, but not in subjects prescribed for any particular degree.

The social life during this period, was, in the main, simple and democratic. A number of student organizations were formed, many of which are still in existence. The earliest literary societies were the Adelphic and Philomathean organized in March, 1869. Two years later the women of the University organized the Alethenai. In the same year (1871) the University band furnished its first music for commencement. The first student publication appeared in November, 1871, and was known as The Student and published monthly. The paper two years later changed its name to The Illini. The Young Men's Christian Association and the Agricultural Society date back to the same year. In 1874, ther was organized an association for the advancement of telegraph, known as the Illinois Industrial University Telegraphic Association. Instruments on the line numbered twenty-five, and the central offices were open for practice all hours of the day.

In the fall of 1868 Professor Samuel Walker Shattuck came to the University as Assistant Professor of Mathematics and Instructor in Military Tactics. Three years later, he became Professor of Mathematics and continued to serve the University in this department to Sept. 1, 1912. He also filled various other positions. He was Professor of Civil Engineering for the year 1869-70. He was Acting President for six months in 1873, and served as the first Vice President from 1889 to 1894. He became the financial manager in 1873. A high sense of honor and true loyalty in service have been embodied in his career, and the University very appropriately showed its appreciation of him by conferring upon him in June, 1912, the highest honor it can bestow, the degree of LL. D.

No sketch of the University would be complete without the mention of Edward Snyder, who was appointed at the same November meeting in 1868 as Professor Shattuck. His primary interest was in modern languages, but the exigencies of the time compelled him to teach a great variety of subjects as remote as bookkeeping and military tactics. He was a most sympathetic adviser and friend of the students. He continually gave or lent them money; and in 1890, three years after his retirement from active service, he gave to the University $12,000, to be loaned to need students. He died in 1903.

Professor Nathan Clifford Ricker began his work as Instructor in Architecture in the University in March, 1873. He has twice acted as Dean of the College of Engineering. Many of the University buildings have been constructed after plans drawn by him. Professor Ira Osborn Baker came to the University as Assistant in Civil Engineering and Physics in September 1874 after having graduated the spring before. Thus two of the present faculty have been connected with the institution approximately forty years.

The period of Dr. Gregory's administration is not marked as one of the great prosperity financially. The University was the owner of 480,000 acres of land scrip. The Board of Trustees proposed at first to locate 50,000 acres of its land scrip, and to sell the rest; but the pressure for funds was so great that it located but 25,000 acres, about 9,000 being in the state of Nebraska and 16,000 in the state of Minnesota. The large amount of land scrip thrown upon the market by this and other land grant universities had greatly depreciated its value,[1] and the 455,000 acres sold brought but $319,178.87, or seventy cents an acre.

As fast as the cash was received it was invested in such securities as law demanded, and the rate of interest then current in the state, eight to ten per cent, yielded from $25,000 to $30,000 per annum and was utilized for the payment of current expenses of instruction. The money panic of 1873 did not seriously affect the finances of the University until about 1877, when debtors began to refund their loans at lower rates of interest. In this way, the income of the University was largely diminished. During the year 1878 the expenditures were found to be $3,500 in excess of the income. No surplus funds were on hand and there was no prospect of increasing the interest on the endowment fund. Something had to be done. So it seemed best to reduce somewhat the salaries of the teaching force. Dr. Gregory suggested that the reduction should begin with himself, not because his salary was the largest, but rather because he would prefer to se his own compensation reduced 20 or 25 per cent than the already too meager salaries of his associates lessened. The reduction of $3,500 was made by taking small amounts from the various salaries and departments, and at the request of the Regent $400 from his own salary. Places which became vacant were left so. Certain departments were cut off—those of mining commerce, and domestic economy. The fees of students were raised. Economy in its most rigid form was practiced everywhere.

Meanwhile the internal condition of affairs became gloomy. The cordial agreement which had existed between the students and the Regent and faculty became strained, and finally open rebellion occurred.

Under these discouraging circumstances Dr. Gregory submitted his resignation at the June commencement 1880 and it was immediately accepted by the Board. He spent the remainder of his life in Washington, D. C. where he served on the commission of education, for a time and from 1895-7 was Acting President of Pennsylvania State College. He died in Washington October 19, 1898. On Sunday, the 23d of October of that year, a memorial convocation was held in the old University Chapel, and his body was laid to rest in ground just west of University Hall. In speaking of him, the alumni of the University, gathered in Chicago, expressed themselves as follows:

"Full of years and honor, like a shock of ripened corn in an abundant year, our beloved instructor and friend, Dr. John M. Gregory, the founder and first Regent (President) of our Alma Mater, has been gathered to his fathers."[1]

Dr. Gregory served the University for thirteen long and hard years, at a time when wisdom, foresight, promptness, enthusiasm, and courage—all the characteristics of a competent leader—were in most urgent demand, and in none of these respects was he found wanting.

Upon his resignation the Board appointed Dr. Selim Hobart Peabody, formerly Professor of Physics and Mechanical Engineering, Regent pro tempore. Dr. Peabody was born at Rockingham, Vermont, August 20, 1829. He spent one year in the Public Latin School of Boston, but owing to his father's death, circumstances compelled him to leave school and help earn a livelihood for himself and others. After working five years he entered the University of Vermont at the age of nineteen and graduated in 1852. The next two years were spent, first as principal of the high school at Burlington, Vt., and then as teacher in the Collegiate Institute at Fairfax, Vt. In 1854 he became Professor of Mathematics and Physics in the Polytechnic College of Philadelphia. Three years later he accepted the position of Chief Clerk in the United States land office at Eau Claire, Wisconsin. In 1859 he took charge of the city school at Fond du Lac, and in 1862 he became superintendent of schools at Racine, Wis. Three years later he became an instructor in the City high school. On March 11, 1868—Inauguration Day—he was offered the professorship of mechanical science and engineering in the Illinois Industrial University. This he declined, but in 1871 he went to the Massachusetts Agricultural College at Amherst as Professor of Physics and Civil Engineering, where he remained three years, and then returned to his old position in Chicago. In 1877 he received the degree of doctor of philosophy from the University of Vermont. On the 10th of October, 1878, he accepted the appointment of Professor of Mechanical Engineering and Physics in Illinois Industrial University and served in this capacity until the close of March, 1880, when he resigned to accept the work of editor-in-chief of what later became the International Cyclopedia. On July 27th, of this year, he was reappointed to the same professorship and made Regent pro tempore, assuming the new duties on August 15th. The following March, 1881, he was elected Regent of the University and continued as such until he presented his resignation June 10, 1891.[2]

Almost all of his adult life, to the time of his election to the regency, had been spent in teaching and accompanying activities. It is said that at the time of his appointment he could have taught successfully any subject offered in the curriculum of the institution.

Dr. Peabody encountered numerous annoyances and difficulties during his regime. In the beginning, many of the students assumed a questioning attitude toward him. The seniors were said to have held a meeting to determine whether they would return or not, but kindly consented to give the new man a trial.[1] The first serious hitch came from a clash between certain secret fraternities and the court of the organized students' government. As a result, the Regent recommended, and the trustees approved, a ruling that no student could enter the University until he had pledged himself not to join a fraternity, and that no student should be graduated until he certified that he had not belonged to any fraternity while in the University. The adoption of these rules disclosed the existence of four such organizations. Their members petitioned the faculty to repeal the rules, but the faculty only turned their petitions over to the Board, which recommended that their requests be refused. The rule was strenuous, and was not repealed until September 1891.[2] From the time of the passage of the rule, more or less antagonism existed, directed chiefly toward the Regent, whose duty it was to execute the mandate. Unfortunately for him, he was a man sufficiently sensitive to criticism to find it discomforting.

Another occurrence, trivial in itself, also inflicted no little injury. One of the cadet captains in the military organization failed to receive an examination grade sufficient to permit him to continue in his official position. His brother officers undertook to compel his re-instatement by entering upon what we would call a strike. Dissatisfied students were allowed to take their grievances to the Board of Trustees, and it in turn sat as a sort of high court, and in effect, put the faculty upon trial. In this case, a matter which should have been adjusted without great difficulty, became unnecessarily burdensome.

President Peabody systematized administrative affairs, instituted improved bookkeeping and gathered up loose ends everywhere. He personally attended to numerous details. Dr. T. J. Burrill, in writing of his work, said that "throughout his administration he had no stenographer. The University did not own during his time a typewriting machine. The official correspondence was mainly conducted in his own handwriting. There was no registrar. At the beginning of each term he personally issued class permits and at the close recorded class grades. Aside from his headship in the department of Mechanical Engineering and Physics, he taught classes (during different terms) in Mechanics and Hydraulics and Mental Science, the latter subject being required of all seniors. It is little wonder that there was not much time for effective campaigning outside or for dreaming of future greatness."

But in spite of many obstacles, and in spite of the fact that these were days of small things educationally, progress was made during this administration. In 1879-80 there were 434 students (reduced in 1880-81 to 379), and 26 teachers of all grades, of whom 15 were of professional rank; in 1890-91, there were 519 students and 40 instructors, 24 of whom were of professional rank. Thus there was a gain in students of 19.6 per cent and in the corps of instruction of 53.9 per cent, and for those having professional rank, 60 per cent. For the first named year the total income from all sources was about $60,650; for the last named, $124,600, or 146 per cent gain. The total legislative appropriation for the session of 1879 was $25,500; that for the session of 1891 was $147,200. This latter figure included $70,000 for the Natural History Building, but excluding this, the gain was $51,700, or 203 per cent.[1]

Before President Peabody's administration, all state appropriations had been clearly for specified purposes and exclusive salaries for instruction. At the legislative session of 1881, the trustees resolved to ask in addition to the usual sums, for an appropriation for the current expenses of instruction. The legislature granted the sum of $11,400 to help cover the amount of the loss suffered by the University because of the reduction in the interest on its investments.[2] The next legislature was asked for $14,000, for the same purpose, and the grant was made. During the biennial periods which followed, the sums of $24,000, $32,000,[3] and $40,000 were allowed. respectively.

Appropriations for buildings were small, and were slow in coming. After much persuasion and political wire pulling on the part of the Regent and his local aids, $10,000 was secured for a Drill Hall in 1889. This caused great rejoicing. During the year the students purchased and placed in the Drill Hall $125 worth of gymnastic apparatus, the money being for the most part the proceeds of an athletic entertainment given the year before in Champaign. Those who at that time wished to practice in the gymnasium paid 50 cts. a term for a ticket, and with the money so secured, instructors were employed from among the students. At the next General Assembly, Regent Peabody, almost unaided by others connected with the University, succeeded in winning sufficiently the good will of the legislators to cause the passage of a bill carrying $70,000 for a new Natural History building.

In 1887, a law was passed making membership in the Board of Trustees elective, at a general state election, and restoring the Superintendent of Public Instruction as an ex officio member, thus there are today three ex-officio and nine elective members of the Board. The change in the manner of election helped materially to bring the institution before the people of the state. It also made it possible for women to serve on the Board. None became members, however, until November, 1904, when Mrs. Lucy L. Flower was elected. It is interested to note that she received many times the number of votes that have been cast for any other woman as a candidate for office in this state.[4] While she was the first woman regularly elected a member of the Board, Mrs. Julia Holmes Smith really served a short time before her, having been appointed by the Governor to fill an unexpired term.

In 1884 the opportunity seemed favorable to begin the sale of the 9,000 acres of land located in Nebraska, and by judicious management the endowment fund was thus raised from about $320,000 to upwards of $450,000.[5] The sale of this land stretched out over a period of twenty-five years, the last being sold only in 1909. The sale of the land in Minnesota began at a somewhat later date, and all is now sold. The total endowment fund received by the University up to June 1, 1916, from the sale of its land scrip amounted to $649,012. 91. The pressing need for funds and the dislike for paying taxes upon this land caused much of it to be sold at a very low price.

In 1887 the federal government again took up the work it had begun in 1862. By the passage of the Hatch Act, approved March 12, of that year, the national government appropriated $15,000 per annum to each state for the purpose of establishing and maintaining, in connection with the colleges founded upon congressional act of 1862, agricultural experiment station "to aid in acquiring and diffusing among the people of the United States useful and practical information to subjects connected with agriculture, and to promote scientific investigation and experiment respecting the principles and application of agricultural science." President Peabody took a prominent part in the discussion of the convention which led to the passage of this act. Under its provision, the Agricultural Experiment Station of Illinois was founded in 1888 and placed under the direction of the trustees of the university, and a part of the University farm, with buildings, was assigned for its use. State appropriations have been added to the federal grants to the Station, until its revenues have become the largest of those of similar institutions throughout the world.[1]

In 1890, by another measure known as the Morrill College Aid Act,[2] the Congress of the United States made further appropriations for the land grant colleges. Under this enactment each such college or university received the first year $15,000, the second $16,000, and thereafter $1,000 a year additional to the amount of the preceding year, until the amount reached $25,000, which sum was to be paid yearly. The use of this fund, although restricted, made possible indirectly a considerable development in the humanities as well as in the natural sciences.

As the institution developed, the name "Illinois Industrial University" was felt to be a serious handicap. It was never understood in the sense oroginally intended. The promoters had meant to establish an institution in which a liberal education should be offered, and one which should be particularly suited to those engaged in industrial pursuits, in distinction to the profession as they were then recognized. But the prevailing impression gained for the name was than manual labor was a prominent feature. The name came to be considered a serious obstacle to the institution, and a bill was introduced in the legislature of 1885 for its change. The application for a change of name met with bitter opposition, especially in the senate, many of the opponents contending that the change would be detrimental to the "industrial ideas of the early advocates. But on June 19 1885, Governor Oglesby approved the bill changing the name to "The University of Illinois."

In this same year the State Laboratory of Natural History was transferred to the University from Normal. This laboratory was created for the purpose of making a natural history survey of the state, publishing the results, and furnishing specimens to the public schools and to the state museums. These collections amounted to 75,000 specimens, in round numbers, besides 15,000 bottles, vials, and other packages, the contents of which were largely unclassified. The apparatus transferred with this material consisted chiefly of a very full outfit of collecting apparatus for both terrestrial and aquatic work and a considerable amount of microscopic materials and apparatus.

During the régime of Dr. Peabody, knowledge of the University was spread among the people of the state principally by means of addresses and exhibits. It has been estimated that during 1888 alone over 100 gatherings were attended by members of the faculty and more than 200 addresses were delivered. The most notable of the technical exhibitions were kept on display, as follows: six months at the State House in Springfield, sixteen months at the expositions at New Orleans; at the great educational displays at Madison, Wisconsin, and Chicago; and at the state fairs.[1]

Many things conspired to make Dr. Peabody's office a hard one to administer. Matters of dicipline, disturbances in the cadet battalion and a radical change in the personnel of the Board were circumstances which so strengthened the opposition to the Regent as to defeat his re-election in 1891 for the next biennial period. In June he offered his resignation, which was at once accepted. That he succeeded as well as he did is evidence of great personal and professional power among men and of exalted devotion to the cause he espoused.

Upon his resignation the Board temporarily appointed a man who had made his life a part of the University and who through the varying fortunes of the institution had filled many important and critical gaps, Dr. Thomas Jonathan Burrill. He first came to the University as a special assistant to teach algebra, on the agreement that as soon as botany could be provided for, he should have charge of it. Three months after his first connection with the institution, T. J. Burrill became Assistant Professor of Natural History, which at that time included botany. He became full Professor of Botany and Horticulture in 1871. His professorship began at "sun up" and lasted indefinitely and included anything that needed doing. He taught most of the day, planted with his own hands or saw to the planting of most of the trees on the campus, wrote reports, lectured here and there, served on innumerable committees, collected specimens up and down the state, and was even charged at one time by the Board with the sale of a pair of mules, whose labors on the South Farm showed that they were not so able to stand the strenuous life as he was. After the founding of the Agricultural Experiment Station in 1888, Professor Burrill became its horticulturist.

In 1875 Dr. Burrill became the corresponding secretary of the Board of Trustees, a position he held for thirteen years. In 1878, he was appointed Dean of the College of Science, and for a brief time was Acting Regent. When the Regency changed in 1880, he filled the place temporarily. Four years later when the head of the University was absent for a brief time on University business he was made presiding officer. Upon the resignation of Dr. Peabody in 1891, Dr. Burrill began an indefinite interregnum. Almost his first undertaking was to organize the military department, which had caused a great deal of trouble in preceding years. He effected such an organization that it has never caused any trouble since.

Students were allowed greater freedom and responded with greater sanity of conduct. Everywhere a better spirit grew up. The old fixed courses of study were abolished and substantially our present system evolved. In September, 1891, the Board passed the following resolution with regard to fraternities:

"Resolved, That the pledge hitherto required for candidates for entry to the University in regard to college fraternities be omitted, and that the subject of these fraternities be referred to the committee on rules."

During Dr. Burrill's administration, the attendance rapidly increased. Student organizations were stimulated. We find the first University Glee Club organized in October, 1891. The first annual concert of the Illinois Military Band was given in February, 1892. Besides there were organized the Mandolin Club, Chemistry Club, Art Club, Students' Assembly for "Social and Intellectual Purposes," etc.

But perhaps the point of greatest triumph in his administration was the finances. The Board had been accustomed to ask support for the University in a most modest way, and the result was that it had been doled out to them in fifty-cent pieces. Dr. Burrill advocated asking for everything wanted, leaving the legislature to cut down the request if it saw fit. From the appeal to the legislature in 1893 came the appropriation for the engineering building, and greatly increased sums for other expenses. The total appropriation rose from $147,000 to $295,000.[1]

Several new courses of study had their origin in this period, such as the Graduate School, as well as the School of Philosophy and Pedagogy, included in the College of Literature and Arts; the department of Municipal and Sanitary Engineering and Architectural Engineering were likewise created. In January, 1893, the agricultural short course was offered. The office of Registrar was created August 16th of the same year, and the appointment of W. L. Pillsbury was made. In 1894 an appropriation of $1,800 was made for a biological station at Havana and $1,200 for a summer school at the University. The first summer session began the following June and continued four weeks; thirty-eight persons were enrolled, twenty-six of whom were teachers from over the state. Members of the regular faculty gave the instruction and the full resources of the University, laboratories, libraries, and apparatus made available for the work.

Although the preparatory class served as an important feeder for the University it was not the intention of the governing boards that this class should be largely increased. In March, 1894, however, the Board established a two years' course in the preparatory school. Preparatory classes had been taught almost from the beginning of the institution, but with the anticipation that the time would soon come when such instruction might be wholly left to the high schools. If it had seemed possible, the University authorities would gladly have abandoned the preparatory work, but if, as it appeared, it must be continued, better provision had to be made for it. Hence, a principal was appointed, teachers were employed, and a course of instruction mapped out.

While the faculty confined itself in the main to undergraduate instruction, the graduate department was slowly taking shape. The first fellowships were instituted in 1892, and in 1894 the faculty was authorized to define the requirements for doctors' degrees.

The University gradually extended its relations with the public school system of the state through its accredited schools, and also by the aid of the county superintendents who conducted examinations for scholarships, and by its course of University extension lectures. A great change came over the state in its attitude toward the University. Dr. Burrill's policy was one of open discussion, friendly co-operation with all educational and other interests of the state, and had much to do with allaying opposition on all sides.

Forty-four years is a long time to serve an institution, and when that service had been rendered with faithfulness, kindly benevolence, and utter unselfishness, the institution should certainly honor the man. Accordingly at the 41st commencement the University conferred upon Dr. Burrill the highest honor that it can give—the honorary degree of doctor of laws. Although Dr. Burrill retired from active duty Sept. 1, 1912, he retained his office in the Natural History Building to the time of his death, the institution having still the benefit of the counsel of this superior man whose visions were not even then, of the past University, but of the future.

Various causes delayed the action in electing a new Regent, but it was felt that the important thing was to find the right man, no matter how much time it might require. Finally after three years of inquiry and discussion, the Board tendered the appointment, April 13, 1894, to Andrew Sloan Draper of New York. The title of Regent as applied to the chief executive of a collegiate institution was found to be confusing since the term was generally used for a member of the board of control—a trustee. The legislative enactment founding the University designated the executive by this name and it was so used from that time up to the appointment of Dr. Draper. With his appointment the Board of Trustees gave authority for the title "President" to be used instead of the title "Regent" as given in the University charter. The time fixed for the beginning of Dr. Draper's services was August 1, 1894, and upon that date he assumed the duties of this office.

The third president of the University was of sturdy New England stock. He was born June 21, 1848, at Westford, New York. He was educated for the profession of law in the Albany Law School of Union College, graduating in 1871. For nearly a dozen years after his graduation in law, he practiced his profession. He was a member of the New York state legislature in 1881, a Judge of the United States Court of Alabama Claims from 1884 to 1886, and State Superintendent of Public Instruction from 1886 to 1892. He received the honorary degree of laws from Colgate in 1889, from Columbia in 1903 and from the University of Illinois in 1905.[1] For two years previous to his coming to the University he was superintendent of the public schools of Cleveland, Ohio.

President Draper did not aspire to the presidency of the University. He was sought out by the Board. He says, "I had serious misgivings about the advisability of accepting the post. I doubted my adaptability to it." The fact that he was not a university man caused him to hesitate. While for a long time he had followed educational thought, he had not concerned himself much about college and university work. But his wide experience with men, in politics and educational work, and his ability as an organizer, aided greatly in his management of University affairs.

President Draper early sided with the many friends of the University who felt that, while the institution was organized primarily to educate people for industrial vocations, it was not doing its whole duty as long as its efforts were confined within these limits. Conferences were held with the trustees and faculties as to the best means of beginning departments of law, medicine, and teaching. The result of this activity was that during his administration the University organized and established a number of new schools and departments.

The first new school was that of Pharmacy. The Chicago College of Pharmacy made a proposition to turn over and donate its school and property to the University on the provision that it be maintained as a part of the University of Illinois. The Board accepted the proposition at its April meeting, 1896,[2] and on May 1, this College became the School of Pharmacy.

Negotiations looking toward the affiliation of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Chicago with the University, which had been going on for several years, were concluded by the Board of Trustees March 9, 1897.[3]

On April 21, 1897, it became the School of Medicine of the University of Illinois. It had been one of the foremost of such schools of the Middle West. Its buildings were substantially constructed and its location directly opposite the Cook County Hospital, and in the very center of opportunities for medical research, gave the students unusual clinical privileges. The first year there were 409 registered at this medical college.

The organization of a School of Law was a matter which had long been in the minds of the authorities, and nearly two years previous to the opening of the School, the Board of Trustees had determined that the step should be taken. Pursuant to their action of Dec. 8, 1896,[1] the School of Law was organized and instruction began September 13, 1897. The formal opening was through a public meeting held in the chapel of the University, which was addressed by Justice Jacob W. Wilkin of the Supreme Court of the state. The faculty of the School of Law has been composed from the beginning of professors devoting their entire time to instruction, and of other professors who taught related subjects in the University, such as constitutional law, the history of jurisprudence, and non-resident lecturers. The course of study at first covered two years, but a very short time later it was re-arranged on the three-year basis. On February 9, 1900, the School of Law became the College of Law; and on the same date the School of Medicine became the College of Medicine.[2]

In 1897, the School of Library Economy which had been established in 1893 at the Armour Institute of Technology in Chicago was transferred to the University; the Director of that school was appointed librarian of the University Library; and the State Library School was opened. There were but two other such schools in the country and no other west of the Allegheny Mountains. Admission to the school was placed upon the same basis as admission to other departments of the University.

From time to time some slight provision had been made for musical instruction and in 1895 the work had been reorganized and enlarged. By vote of the trustees on June 9, 1897, the department became the School of Music with a separate faculty and organization.[3] Instruction was given in violin, piano, and voice, and a course was offered leading to the degree of bachelor of music.

The adequate supervision of social interests was felt to require distinct administrative attention, and at the March meeting, 1897, the Board of Trustees created a Dean of Women's department and appointed a Dean in the person of Dr. Violet D. Jayne of Minneapolis, Minnesota.[4] Events proved the selection to be a wise one. In 1901, a similar measure was adopted with reference to male students, by the appointment of Professor Thomas Arkle Clark, Dean of Undergraduates, who served in this capacity until 1909, when he became Dean of Men.

In 1899 some additional courses were offered in railway engineering. Two years before this the Big Four Railway Company had built a dynamometer car for the use of the University upon its system, and in 1900 the Illinois Central Railroad did the same thing, and decided improvements were made upon the first car offered.

In the summer of 1899 the University made an earnest effort to establish the summer session. Some such efforts had been made years before, but without much success. It secured the attendance of 148 students during a term of nine weeks. The work was satisfactorily initiated and the results were considered quite substantial. The work offered was largely of a character which would appeal to teachers in the high schools of the state, and persons of this class responded in considerable numbers. Students were allowed to do work which might count towards a University degree, and many availed themselves of the privilege.

The work of the State Entomologist's office had been done at the University of Illinois since January, 1885. By legislative enactment in 1899 it became permanently established at the University, the trustees of which are required by that act to provide for the Entomologist and his assistants such office and laboratory rooms as may be necessary to the performance of their duties.

On March 12, 1901,[5] a College of Dentistry was organized as a department in the College of Medicine. In the following fall the school opened with an enrollment of 134 students.

The General Assembly in 1900 made an appropriation for the establishment of courses of training for business, and, in accordance with that action, the trustees approved the organization of the Courses in Business Administration (frequently given elsewhere under the name of School of Commerce). The department opened in 1902 with two new professors, one called from Yale, and the other from Tome Institute.

One year later the special appropriation by Congress to the state made possible the founding of the Engineering Experiment Station. Within its scope were embraced several problems connected with architecture, and civil, electrical, mechanical, and sanitary engineering. The quarters were in the University buildings and shops.

President Draper managed in a large degree to put the University in a more favorable light before the people of the state, who in many cases had looked upon it with disfavor or with indifference. One of the menaces of the University's power to do good was the claim often made through the secular newspapers of the state that there was little religious spirit in the University. President Draper early began placing the facts before the people to show that this was untrue. Statistics from the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations refuted these charges; greater efforts were made by the several church denominations; and near the end of his administration the percentage of men and women who were parties to the great Student Volunteer Movement for Christian Missions was shown to be greater than in any other state institution.

President Draper overcame much of the opposition which had existed in a measure between the University and other colleges of the state by showing in addresses and papers that all of these colleges and the state's big school were needed to do the work which should be done.

The increase in attendance at the University during the decade from 1894 to 1904 was marvelous. The attendance at Urbana increased from 750 in 1893-4 to 3,100 in 1902-3, and during the latter year there were about 900 in the Chicago departments. The number of instructors increased proportionately. Especially striking was the growth of the College of Agriculture. In the early nineties the attendance of regularly matriculated students had almost reached the vanishing point, a result due partly to defective equipment and partly to the prevailing skepticism among the farmers themselves with regard to the possibilities of scientific instruction in agriculture. During this period new interest sprang up, the appropriations increased, and in 1903, for the first time, there came to the University a substantial number of agricultural students.

Not only were the appropriations increased for the College of Agriculture, but there was also a general increase throughout the University. For the biennium commencing July 1, 1895, the appropriation for the general current expense was $180,000, and for the following two-year periods, respectively, $220,000; $270,000; $350,000; and $500,000; making a total in ten years of $1,520,000.[1] In addition to these increased appropriations for current expenses, there were large appropriations for buildings.

The Library building, dedicated at commencement in 1897, was occupied in the September following. It was both designed and constructed by graduates of the University of Illinois. The interior decorations were made by Newton A. Wells, and it is said that they present the best example of a pure Byzantine style to be found in the United States. The architects were Professors N. Clifford Ricker and James M. White. A new astronomical observatory was completed, equipped, and occupied. Under the dome a fine twelve-inch telescope was erected by the foremost telescope builders in the United States. Another important addition to the group of University buildings was the electrical engineering building located just north of Engineering Hall; and the Central Heating Plant located to the east of the Electrical building—both designed by professors in the department of Architecture. All the University buildings are heated by the Central Heating Plant. The pipes are carried in brick tunnels a third of a mile in length and large enough to enable a person walking erectly to pass through them.

At the close of the year 1900, the main group of agricultural buildings was completed on the South Campus, from an appropriation of $150,000. This was the first time the state had expended any considerable amount of money to provide an agricultural plant.

Other buildings erected during President Draper's administration were a new wood shop on the site of the old one which had been burned, a President's house, a splendid gymnasium, an excellent building for applied mechanics, a testing laboratory, and University water station. South of the Science building a substantial and capacious chemical laboratory was constructed. The old chemical laboratory was remodeled and given over to the College of Law. The building of the College of Medicine in Chicago was largely reconstructed, and the West Division high school property was also acquired and put into excellent condition. In 1897 a new gymnasium was installed on the upper floor of the old mechanical building. It was not ideal in appearance, but was adequately equipped and well suited for practical use. It was provided with a very satisfactory equipment of lockers, and also with reasonable toilet and bathing accommodations. Illinois field was considerably enlarged and much improved in appearance. The unsightly board fence was removed and a handsome iron one put in its place. The running track was enlarged so as to be a full third of a mile in length.

The legislature of 1903 made provision for the establishment of the Woman's building, three agricultural buildings, a foundry, and a steam laboratory.

A new green house was constructed and occupied opposite the new electrical building, and added an attractive feature to the University grounds. In connection with the Electrical building and the Central Heating Plant there was installed and put into operation an electric lighting plant. It supplied arc lights upon the campus and also incandescent lights in the buildings which are wired for the purpose.

Lightning struck the chemical building in August, 1896. The roof and practically the whole of the interior of the building were destroyed. Nothing remained but the four walls. Steps were at once taken to renew the roof and the interior was replaced in a very hasty, rough and unsubstantial manner because of lack of time and funds to do the work properly. A year later, in June, 1897, the Natural History building was struck by lightning. The results were not so serious as with the chemical laboratory, but fire followed and not only the roof but also the upper portions of the interior, and the building and its contents, were seriously injured by water. The damage to the latter building was repaired in time to prevent any interruption of University work.

On June 9, 1900, the oldest building on the campus, which accommodated the wood shops, testing laboratory, hydraulic laboratory, repair shops, and gymnasium was totally destroyed by fire. The building was an old one, yet substantial and exceedingly useful, and housed important interests.

Perhaps the event which caused the most concern on the part of the administration was the defalcation of the Treasurer in February, 1897. All the cash balances of the several funds were involved. All the appropriations had been collected from the State Treasurer to the end of the year, and there were no means which could be applied to salaries and other expenses. Fortunately the legislature was in session and official notice was brought to the attention of that body, which came to the relief of the University by assuming charge of the whole matter and restoring the funds completely.

President Draper showed the keenest personal interest in students and student activities. The united action of the students in all important measures to be advanced, the kindly and frank treatment of each other in their personal and class relations, and the hearty and loyal support of all University interests were immense factors in the control and enlargement of the institution. The adoption of orange and blue as the University colors by the general assembly of students within a month after the beginning of the administration was a step in this direction. Encouragement was given to athletics by the employment of coaches and instructors in the department, and were made more popular by the President's attendance upon the games. The grounds were beautified and made attractive by making open spaces for sward, the paving of walks and drives, and the planting of a colony of squirrels upon the campus.

While President Draper stood for what furnished students social and physical enjoyment, at the same time he was a rigid disciplinarian. The enforcement of authority has been made easier down to the present time because of President Draper's successful stand in administering justice after a certain class riot, which occasioned considerable difficulty.

Dr. Draper resigned in March, 1904, his resignation taking effect after two months' leave of absence, thus practically rounding out ten years of service. They were a splendid ten years for the University of Illinois. Things were favorable when he began. The excellent opportunity for the chief executive was turned to the best account. He quickly appreciated the situation and with abundant forcefulness and admirable generalship, carried the institution forward in its remarkable career. Having been elected to the newly created office of Commissioner of Education in the state of New York, he gave up his work in Illinois with abundantly demonstrated evidences of its success during the ten years of his presidency.

On November 5, 1904, Dr. Edmund Janes James, the fourth president of the University, assumed the duties of that office. His formal installation took place in October of the following year. On this occasion delegates were present from a large number of American and foreign universities, making the exercises of unusual interest. Perhaps one of the most stiking features was a series of conferences on various questions of educational policy.

President James is the first native of Illinois to be elected to the presidency of its state university. Moreover, he has served the two other great universities of the state, having presided over Northwestern for a time and having been for six years a professor in the University of Chicago. He was born May 24, 1855, at Jacksonville, Ill., and is a descendant of a pioneer Methodist minister. He prepared for college in the Model Department of the Illinois State Normal School and in the fall following his graduation there, became a student at Northwestern University. After spending one year at this institution and one year at Harvard, he entered the University of Halle in 1875, where two years later, at the age of twenty-two, he received his doctor's degree. He first taught as principal of the high school at Evanston, going from there to accept a similar position in the High School Department of the Illinois Normal University. In 1883 he became Professor of Public Administration in the University of Pennsylvania. While there he was for a time secretary of the graduate faculty and organized the instruction in this department. He was also Director of the Wharton School of Finance and Economy.

In 1896 he accepted a position as Professor of Public Administration and Director of the University Extension Division in the University of Chicago. Six years later he resigned this position to become President of Northwestern University, and in 1904 he again resigned his position in order to accept a similar one at the University of Illinois.

He received the honorary degree LL.D. from Cornell College (Iowa) in 1902, from Wesleyan, 1903, Queen's College, 1903, Harvard, 1909, and Michigan and Northwestern in 1914.

The progress of the University during the last few years has been rapid and uninterrupted. Opportunities for advanced work in nearly every department of the University have been materially increased. Perhaps the organization of the Graduate School as a separate administrative body was a step which aided most greatly along this line. The legislatures of 1907 and 1909 appropriated for the work of the school a sum of $50,000 a year. This was a step unprecedented in the history of state universities and the act was warmly welcomed by educational authorities.

Hand in hand with graduate work goes the necessity for a strong library. While not yet all that can be desired, the University library has grown rapidly. The number of volumes in 1904 was 63,724, and the number of pamphlets, 14,512; while on May 1, 1916, the general University library contained 330,895 volumes, and 39,760 pamphlets, 3,853 pieces of sheet music, 1,829 maps, 20,000 catalogs and a file of photographs.

The courses in Business Administration were established in a modest way in 1900. Five years later an effort was made to put the work on a better basis, and the legislature gave the School an annual income of $25,000. Since that time it has become one of the strongest in the country. The legislature recognized the importance to the state of this department in the substantial way of making an appropriation for a Commerce building, the corner-stone of which was laid Mar 21, 1912.

The department of Household Science assumed a notable position when in 1910, for the first time in any university, it offered a complete four-year course in household management, as distinguished from Household Science.

The College of Literature and Arts and the College of Science were consolidated July 1, 1913, thus eliminating unnecessary duplications and increasing exceedingly the efficiency of these departments. The new college is making a definite effort not only for the promotion of research, but also toward the uplifting of secondary education by giving to prospective teachers opportunities for higher work and better preparation.

During the year 1905, the Trustees created a School of Education. In some respects this was a grouping of the courses in the University which pertained most directly to the future work of the teacher. All instructors who offer courses primarily for prospective teachers are on the faculty of this school. In framing its organization, the presidents of the normal schools of the state were consulted, and their advice has proved most helpful on many important points.

The legislature in 1905 made the small appropriation of $5,000 for the establishment of courses in ceramics, in response to a request from the various ceramic societies of the state, who asked that the University give thorough and reliable instruction in the geology of clay working materials, their origin, classification, physical and chemical properties, and their behavior under such influences as are met with during the processes of manufacture. Courses in ceramics and ceramic engineering, supplemented by a course in cement making, were organized and have become regular four-year courses in the College of Science. It is a School which has proved itself of much benefit to the people of the state in a number of ways. It has found a method of making high grade brick and tile from material before regarded as worthless. It has shown, in the manufacture of enamel brick, that Illinois clays may be used more profitably than those of other states. It has compounded a white and cheaper grade of stoneware. It has given to the people formulæ for compounding crystalline and fritted glazes which heretofore had been kept secret.[1]

In the same year the State Geological Survey and the State Water Survey became scientific departments connected with the University. The legislature created the State Geological Survey as a bureau of the University, with the objects and duties usual to such surveys. The University has furnished suitable quarters for the offices of this survey, and it has found in the laboratories of the University a most valuable assistance in the prosecution of its work. The presence in the University of men of the scientific standing of those engaged in the Survey has been of very substantial, though indirect value to the scientific advance in these various subjects. The State Water Survey had for its purpose the study of the water supply of the state in all its aspects. Its work has been both in the field and in the laboratories.

The College of Agriculture and the Experiment Station have produced a profound influence upon the farming practice of the state in the last ten years.

The main contribution of the College of Engineering, in the same period, as distinguished from what it has done hitherto, probably lies in the stimulus given to industrial research through the Engineering Experiment Station. As the work and purposes of the Station have become better understood in the state, the officers in charge have been flooded with applications for help.

On January 30, 1906, the Board of Trustees created a department of Railway Engineering. One year later, supplementing that action, the School of Railway Engineering and Administration was established. This School offers courses in railway, civil, electrical, and mechanical engineering as well as in management.

A Mine Rescue Station was established at the University in 1909. It is in cooperation with the State Geological Survey and the College of Engineering of the University. Its purpose is to demonstrate to mine operators and others the value of oxygen helmets and resuscitation apparatus in connection with rescue work in mines, as an aid to fighting mine fires, and in the opening of mines which have been sealed on account of fires. The Station not only gives demonstration but also undertakes to train men in the use of such apparatus, the service being given gratuitously.

June 13, 1911, a bill was passed providing for a one mill tax on the assessed valuation of all the property of the state for the support of the University. On the present taxing basis, the law should yield about two and one-quarter million dollars a year. This sum is not automatically appropriated to University uses, although it can be used for no other purpose; however, only such a sum will be appropriated biennially from it as the General Assembly is convinced is needed by the institution for which it is collected. This means that the ambitious interests within the University will reach an agreement on the campus; the budget will be made here; and the united requests, within the sum available, can be presented as a unit to the legislative committee. The one mill tax puts the regular support of the University upon a safer foundation, and assures a regular income. No other event in the history of the institution is more important than the passage of this bill.

The Chicago departments of the University have undergone a considerable improvement and reorganization in the past few years. Because of failure to receive appropriations for the operation of its medical department, the University was compelled to close it June 30, 1912. The College of Physicians and Surgeons again opened a school on the same site. This caused such consternation among medical alumni and friends of medical education in Illinois that they proceeded to secure the capital stock of the College of Physicians and Surgeons and then presented it to the Trustees of the University. The College of Medicine was then re-opened March 6, 1913. A vigorous policy of expansion and development followed. The equipment has been perfected and brought down to date, and the entrance requirements have been raised to a par with those of the best medical schools of the United States. Since 1904 the College of Medicine has graduated 2,826 students and enrolled a total of 10,266. The dental department, which was closed at the same time as the medical department and for the same reasons, was re-opened October 1, 1913, The College of Dentistry has also undergone considerable development within the last few years, as well as the School of Pharmacy.

The College of Agriculture is now organized with the following departments: Agronomy, Animal Husbandry, Dairy Husbandry, Horticulture, Veterinary Science and Household Science. The following table gives the registration of students and the size of the faculty since 1890.

The military department of the University has developed in harmony with the spirit of the Lang Grant Act of 1862 until today the University has the largest student enrollment in military of any college in the United States and probably in the world. October 30, 1915, the Trustees authorized the creation of a battery of field artillery, which has already become well organized. All freshmen and sophomores are required to take the work. The Cadet Brigade consists of two regiments of infantry (24 companies), a foot battery of field artillery, signal corps, engineer company and hospital company (consisting of sophomores). There are 2,140 cadets including the band of 165 men and 114 commissioned officers. By virtue of his position the President of the University is the Colonel of the Cadet Brigade.

The Library School was transferred to the University of Illinois from Armour Institute, Chicago, in September, 1897, two years of college work being required for entrance; in 1903 this requirement was raised to three years, and in 1911, to four years of college work.

Two hundred and forty-five students have completed the two years of work and have received the degree of Bachelor of Library Science; two hundred and sixty-eight others have completed the first year's work. About four hundred are now engaged in library work.

Although for many years the University of Illinois has offered advanced students facilities for study and research in various lines, graduate work was undertaken under the name of the Graduate School for the first time in 1892. In 1894 the administration of the school was vested in the Council of Administration, and the vice-president of the University became dean of the school. In 1906 the Graduate School was organized as a separate faculty, consisting of a dean and members of the University faculty assigned to this duty by the President. No means of support were provided, however, separate from those provided for undergraduate work. In the winter of 1906-07 the Forty-fifth General Assembly of the State passed an act appropriating $50,000 per year for the support of a Graduate School of Fine Arts and Sciences in the State University. This is the first time in history when a state legislature has made a specified appropriation for such a purpose, and the act is noteworthy as committing a democratic government definitely to the promotion of advanced scholarship and research in lines which are not primarily practical. This appropriation has been continued by succeeding legislatures, and has enabled the University to carry on valuable investigations for the state and promote the world's knowledge thereby bettering the quality of instruction and establishing the reputation of the University in the world of scholarship.[1] One of the strongest evidences of educational progress of any university lies in the increased estimation in which she is held by her sister institutions throughout the country. Dean Kinley, in writing of this, said, "Our admission to the Association of American Universities and the consequent recognition of our graduate work by foreign universities, expressions of opinion in the newspapers and magazines and personally by distinguished educators, are all cumulative evidence that we have advanced to a higher educational plane in the opinion of those most able to judge.

At the present time the School of Pharmacy is the only department of the University which does not require full standard high school preparation for admission to the University. After September 1, 1916, by action of the Board of Trustees, the College of Pharmacy will require the usual fifteen high school units.[2]

With the increased appropriations and the increased attendance has also come a material strengthening of the teaching force. Salaries of men of professional rank have been increased fifty per cent,[1] and distinguished scholars have been brought to the University from all over the world. The standing today consequently of the faculty of the University of Illinois is indicated by the fact that in the 1903 edition of Who's Who in America there were 34 names of members of the faculty of the University of Illinois, while the edition of 1914-15 gives a list of 102, a gain of about two hundred per cent. Similarly in the 1906 edition of the American Men of Science there were 6 members of the faculty of the University of Illinois among the one thousand greatest scholars of the country, while in 1910 the number had increased to 17.

With the growth and variety of University interests, the problem of administration became more and more complicated. While in the early days matters of discipline were settler by the faculty, and if unsatisfactory, carried to the Board of Trustees, at the present time the Council of Administrations, which is made up of the President, Vice President, and the deans, has complete control of discipline. The General Faculty has given way to the University Senate consisting of the members of the Council and all full professors; although each college maintains its separate faculty, whose action in important matters requires the ratification of the Senate or the Council.

Naturally the increased attendance has meant increased activity in all kinds of student life. Fraternities and sororities have almost doubled in number. The installation of a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi, Tau Beta Pi, and other honorary organizations is a tribute of the esteem which sister institutions in the country hold for Illinois. Interest has developed in debate and oratory and at the same time a record has been maintained in athletics of which Illinoisans may be proud. One of the most comprehensive organizations within the University perhaps is the Illinois Union. It came into existence at a mass meeting of the students on March 3, 1909. The Union is an organization of all Illinois men, whether graduate, undergraduate, or faculty, whose purpose is to develop good fellowship among the students and to promote Illinois spirit by all possible means. It is hoped that a club building may be erected at an early date and greater co-operation will be established among the alumni outgoing student.

One of the sources of strength to any institution is the good will and co-operation of its former students. The interest and pride of the alumni of the University of Illinois in its work seem steadily and plainly to increase. The Alumni Record made its first appearance in 1906 and contained an account of the life and work of each graduate of the institution up to that time, as well as similar accounts of the faculty and trustees. The 1913 publication was an attempt to continue the work, expanding and correcting the biographies, the University of Illinois Directory of 1916 is an attempt to locate all persons who have ever been connected with the Urbana-Champaign departments.

The University has grown from 3 teachers and 77 students in 1868 to 762 teachers, 55 administrative officers, a library staff of 48, and 6427 students in 1916. The most striking development has occurred within the last 20 years. More degrees were conferred annually by the Chicago departments, from the time of their addition to the University up to the year 1907, than by the Urbana departments. In 1903 there were 301 degrees conferred by the Chicago departments, but only 181 in 1904, because of the raising of the standards of the school, while the Urbana departments have increased from 183 in 1902 to 848 in 1914, in spite of the increase of entrance requirements. More degrees were conferred by the university in 1914 than were conferred in all the years from 1868 to 1895, twelve times as many as in 1902, and over twice as many as in 1908. Altogether since its foundation the University has conferred 7,998 degrees in the Urbana departments and in all its departments 12,477 degrees. On June 14, 1916, the University will confer over 1,100 additional degrees, (the figures as compiled June 6, 1916, were 935 for the Urbana departments and 180 for the Chicago departments, making a total of 1,117). The total number of degrees conferred by the University in 1914 represents a larger number than the total attendance at the University of Illinois in any single year prior to 1896, and the number of degrees conferred since 1908 exceeds the number of degrees conferred in the entire previous history of the University of Illinois.[1]

Today the University of Illinois has one of the largest undergraduate departments in America and also has one of the largest enrollments of men students. There are 4,662 undergraduates of whom 3,623 are men. The total attendance in all departments of the University is 4,763 men and 1,535 women. All of these except about 500 are nine month students and this fact should be emphasized in all comparative college statistics, where night and Saturday and three month students are included in the college enrollment.

The rapid growth of the University of Illinois especially during the past decade is seen especially in the size of its student body and faculty which have more than doubled, by its land holdings, value of buildings and size of the library which have nearly trebled. The following table will perhaps present a useful summary:

	Faculty	Attendance Urbana	Attendance Chicago	Land Acres	Buildings	Biennial Income	Library Volumes	Important Buildings
1903–4.....	351	2674	1042	641	$1,127,500	$1,814,863.78	67,040	12

At the time Ex-President Gregory came to the University of Illinois, he states in an address at the dedication of University Hall (Illini, March, 1874, page 68), that when he was considering accepting the presidency of the institution and was interviewing friends in Champaign and Chicago, the trustees residing in or near Champaign, expressed the generally prevalent faith in the institution, that it was to be "the grandest university on the American continent," and in his concluding remarks at this dedication (Illini, March, 1874, page 79), he says, "Some of those who are here today—the youngest of you, perhaps, that hear my words—shall come here on other anniversary occasions and attend dedications of yet other halls that a great and liberal State, mindful of its own civilization, its own grand central, commanding position—the key-stone of the continent—shall consecrate to this great work. Gray-haired and sage, you will recall the memories of this day—you will look still in fancy on this meeting and think on the predictions this day made in your hearing.''

With a state such as Illinois, rich in resources and central in location, realizing its opportunities in its state university, there is every reason to believe that the prediction of its founders will be realized at no distant time.

SOUTH CAMPUS AND SOUTH FARM

ANNALS OF THE UNIVERSITY

1862

Act passed by Congress, and approved July 2, 1862, donating public lands, on the ratio of 30,000 acres for each Senator and Representative, to the states and territories which would provide colleges for the benefit of Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts. The grant was to be accepted and applied to its uses before July, 1867, or it would revert to the government. Illinois entitled to 480,000 acres under Act. The University realizes annually from the Act five per cent on about $610,000 and deferred payments on land contracts amounting to about $35,000.

1863

The Legislature of Illinois accepted the grant Feb. 14, 1863, discussing the matter for some time without being able to come to any agreement on the details of the proposed college or on its location. Some wished to divide the money among the existing colleges, provided they should establish schools of this nature; others wanted to establish a school to teach Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts; and some would attach a new school to the Normal University.

1864

At the State Fair held in Decatur in 1864, committee was appointed by the State Agricultural Society to take up the matter and present some definite plan to the Legislature. Committee composed of Wm. H. Van Epps, Prof. J. B. Turner, A. B. McConnell, B. G. Roots, and John P. Reynolds. Jan. 8, 1865, they drew up a bill as an expression of the views of the farmers, and presented it to the Legislature in 1865, and again in 1867.

1865.

Dec. 14—State meeting of all those interested in the organization of the proposed Industrial University held at Bloomington. Meeting recommended that the state build only one university.

1866.

Sept. 21—Notice published of an informal election to be held in Champaign county on Oct. 10, by order of the board of Supervisors. The voters were to decide whether or not the county should appropriate $100,000.00 worth of Champaign county bonds "to secure the location of the Illinois Industrial University in this county."

Oct. 5—Proposition of Champaign and Urbana was to purchase the building then standing,† called "The Urbana and Champaign Institute Building," popularly

Jonathan C. Stoughton, J. E. Babcock and George Harvey had started the building in 1860 intending it for an institution of higher education for young men and women, figuring to make their profits from the sale of adjoining lots. Undoubtedly if this building had not been ready for occupancy, the Legislature would never have voted to locate the university at Urbana-Champaign.

dubbed "The White Elephant,") with the eight acres on which it stood, at a cost of $30,000.00, use the other $70,000.00 to buy more land and secure the location of the University over the other contestants—Bloomington and Jacksonville being the principal rivals. The Champaign papers said that they could give this building, 1,000 acres for a farm, 100 acres for a "garden-patch" and still have $40,000.00 left.

The building was erected in 1861, supposedly at a cost of $175,000.00, and was said to be "one of the largest and most substantial buildings in the State, second only to the Normal University." It stood at the north end of what is now Illinois Field, facing University Avenue. The Main part of the structure was one hundred twenty-five feet long, forty feet wide, and five stories high. From the center projected a wing forty-four by seventy feet, four stories high. The building contained ninety dormitories, each ten by fifteen, "suitable rooms for principals, professors, etc." and accommodations for 500 students.

Oct. 10—Returns of the election on the question of the bond issue: For, 1406; against, 894—majority for, 512.†

"Urbana and Champaign were unanimously in favor of the measure. A considerable opposition was manifested in some of the country towns, however." This opposition was due to the fact that the smaller towns regarded the whole thing as a scheme on the part of Urbana and Champaign to make the entire county pay for a school which would benefit these two communities only.

Jan. 10—Mr. Tincher (Senator from the Seventh District) introduced into the Senate a bill for "an act to provide for the organization, endowment, and maintenance of the Illinois Industrial University." This bill provided, among other things, that the Institution should be located at Champaign. At the same date Senator Fuller (Twenty-third district) introduced a bill similar to Mr. Tincher's except that it provided for the location of the University by a commission to be appointed by the Governor. These two bills were read twice and ordered printed. Jan. 11—Both bills in the House were introduced, the Champaign bill being offered by Mr. Clark R. Griggs from that district, who sacrificed the speakership of the House in order to be chairman of the committee on the location of the University. He had the bills from the rival communities first introduced and voted down, and then brought in the bill locating the University at Champaign. The Senate at this time voted that the entire grant should be applied to one institution. Jan. 25—The Governor approved a bill giving any county, city, township, or incorporated town authority to levy taxes or voluntary subscriptions for the purpose of securing the location of the University.

Feb. 1—Mr. Tincher moved to amend the Fuller Bill by striking out the section providing for a committee to locate the college. This amendment was carried by a vote of fifteen to nine. Feb. 22—House Bill amended by adding to the offer (the Institute property) as requirements for the location 810 acres of land, $50,000.00 worth of freight (appropriated by the Illinois Central), $100,000.00 in Champaign County Bonds, and $2,000.00 in fruit, shade, and ornamental trees and shrubbery from Dunlap's nursery, making a total of $450,000.00. This bill as amended passed the House on the same day. Its provisions were that the institution should be located temporarily in Urbana. The trustees were to be appointed by the Governor, with approval of the Senate, five from each grand judicial division, and one from each congressional district. They were to serve for six years, without salary, the first appointment to draw lots, one-third to serve two, one-third four, and one-third six years. The trustees were to elect a Regent to serve two years, a Treasurer, and a Recording Secretary, and were to provide buildings, teachers, etc. Students were to be at least fifteen years old. Each county was entitled to a scholarship for descendants of soldiers and seamen. No degrees were to be conferred on graduates. The Regent, with the Governor, the Superintendent of Public Instruction, and the President of the State Agricultural Society were to be ex officio members of the Board. The instructors were "to teach in the most thorough manner such branches of learning as are related to Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts and Military Tactics, without excluding other scientific and classical studies." The college year was to extend through six autumn and winter months so that the students could go home for the six spring and summer months or stay at the University and pursue optional studies "provided that no student shall at any time be allowed to remain in or about the University in idleness, or without full mental or industrial occupation." This Act passed the House by a vote of sixty-six to ten, the Senate by eighteen to seven, and was approved Feb. 28, 1867. The immediate result was a huge celebration in Champaign.

Mar. 8—Passage of Supplemental Bill, providing that on the failure of the county authorities to comply with the requirements of the Act by June 1, the trustees were to locate the University at some other town. Trustees were appointed by Governor Oglesby as follows:

1st Congressional District, David S. Hammond, Cook Co.
2nd Congressional District, Luther W. Lawrence, Boone Co.
3rd Congressional District, Horatio C. Burchard, Stephenson Co.
4th Congressional District, John S. Johnson, Hancock Co.
5th Congressional District, Samuel Edwards, Bureau Co.
6th Congressional District, O. B. Galusha, Grundy Co.
7th Congressional District, M. L. Dunlap, Champaign Co.
8th Congressional District, Samuel Allen, Tazewell Co.
9th Congressional District, Alexander Blackburn, McDonough Co.
10th Congressional District, M. C. Goltra, Morgan Co.
11th Congressional District, J. P. Hungate, Clay Co.
12th Congressional District, Willard C. Flagg, Madison Co.
13th Congressional District, A. M. Brown, Pulaski Co.

First Grand Judicial Division—L. R. McMurry, Effingham Co.; Charles Topping, Union Co.; Thos. Quick, Washington Co.; and Isaac S. Mahan, Marion Co. Second Grand Judicial Division—George Harding, Edgar Co.; Henry Pickerel, Macon Co.; Mason Brayman, Sangamon Co. Third Grand Judicial Division—John M. Van Osdel, Cook Co.; J. C. Burrough, Cook Co.; S. S. Hayt, Cook Co.; Emery Cobb, Kankakee Co.; and Robert Douglass, Lake Co. First meeting to be held in Springfield, Mar. 12, 1867.

Mar. 12—First meeting of the Board of Trustees held in Springfield. Nominations for the position of Regent being called for, the names of Hon. Daniel J. Pickney of Ogle County, Dr. N. N. Wood of Morgan County, Hon. J. L. Pickard of Cook County, and Dr. John Milton Gregory of Kalamazoo, Mich., were proposed. Dr. Gregory was elected and granted a salary of $3,000.00 a year. A committee of five, with the Regent as chairman, was selected to prepare a course of study and to report to the Board. John W. Bunn of Springfield was elected treasurer, and a finance committee was appointed to serve for one year. Willard C. Flagg of Madison County was elected corresponding secretary; O. B. Galusha of Grundy County, recording secretary. The Board passed a resolution favoring the establishment of a Mechanical Department to be located at Chicago. Mar. 29—An election was held in Urbana and Champaign to decide whether the two cities should appropriate $45,000.00 for the University, Champaign to give $25,000.00, Urbana, $20,000.00. The vote was as follows: Champaign:—For, 676; against, 4. Urbana:—For, 406; against, 0. Mar. 29—Dr. Gregory visited Champaign and Urbana for the first time.

Apr. 1—Dr. Gregory entered upon his duties.

Apr. 10—Vote authorizing Supervisors to issue the bonds for $100,000.00 resulted as follows: For, 2,731; against, 867.

May 7—The second meeting of the Board of Trustees was held in the chapel of the "Urbana and Champaign Institute," twenty-two of the thirty-two trustees being present. Opened with prayer by Rev. Mr. Burroughs, one of trustees. Dr. Gregory accepted the appointment, his salary having been increased to $4,000.00 a year. A committee on Buildings and Grounds was appointed, the land grants accepted, and the University permanently located at Urbana. Scrip was ordered sold. A seal was adopted. Evening session was opened with prayer by J. C. Stoughton. It was decided to open the institution on the first day of March, 1868. A resolution to admit both sexes was referred to the Executive Committee to be appointed by the Regent.

A committee on Courses of Instruction reported the following curriculum:

I Agricultural Department
- (1) Agriculture
- (2) Horticulture
- (3) Landscape Gardening

II Polytechnical Department
- (1) Mechanical Science and Art
- (2) Civil Engineering
- (3) Mining and Metallurgy
- (4) Architecture and Fine Arts

III Military Department
- (1) Engineering
- (2) Tactics

IV Chemistry and Natural Science

V Trade and Commerce

VI General Science and Literature
- (1) Mathematics
- (2) Natural History, Chemistry, etc.
- (3) English Language and Literature
- (4) Modern Languages and Literature
- (5) Ancient Languages and Literature
- (6) History and Social Science
- (7) Philosophy (Intellectual and Moral)

July 31—Dr. Gregory issued a circular, proposing that each County Agricultural society offer a prize of one hundred dollars to aid the best scholar from the public schools of the county who should attend the Industrial University.

Nov. 26—Board of Trustees purchased six and one-half city lots adjacent to the University for the price of $1,850.00. The lots purchased lay along the west of what is now Illinois Field. The committee recommended the purchase of twenty-four others, between Romine and Mathews Avenues, east of Illinois Field, which could be secured for $9,150.00. This recommendation was referred to the Finance Committee. The Board decided that all students should register in the Military Department. The school year was divided into three terms, running from September to June. Three men were elected to the faculty, William M. Baker of Springfield, Ill., Professor of English and Natural Philosophy, George W. Atherton of New York, Professor of History and Social Science, and Jonathan Periam, Head Farmer and Superintendent of Practical Agriculture. March 11 was decided upon as the date for the formal opening of the University.

Mar. 2—University "opened for reception of students" with 57 students, 2 professors and the head farmer the first week. Only 3 students registered the first day altho they had been urged to present themselves for examination on the first day.† Total enrollment for first term, 77 students (all men), with 3 professors (Thomas J. Burrill being employed later during the term as instructor in botany‡). Of the 77 students, 45 came from Champaign county; the rest from 19 counties of the state. The larger number of the students were of preparatory rather than of university grade. The following departments were organized, classical as well as industrial subjects being offered: I. Science, Literature and Arts; II. Agriculture; III. Mechanical Science and Art; IV. Military Tactics and Engineering; V. Mining and Metallurgy; VI. Civil Engineering; VII. Analytical and Applied Chemistry; VIII. Natural History, Practical Geology, etc.; IX. Commercial Science and Art.* The broad plan of organization of Regent Gregory has had a deep influence on the entire history of the University.

Mar. 10—Willard F. Bliss elected Professor of Agriculture and Instructor in French. Mar. 11, Wed.—Inaugural Ceremonies and Formal Opening of the University. Hon. S. W. Moulton presided at the exercises. The music was under the direction of Geo. F. Root of Chicago, who set to music the dedication hymn,* written by Dr. Gregory. Letters from Governor Oglesby, Senator Yates, and General Logan were read. The principal address of two hours length was delivered by the Honorable Newton Bateman, State Superintendent of Public Instruction. General Hurlburt in-

*We hail thee! Great Fountain of learning and light;
There's life in thy radiance, there's hope in thy might
We greet now thy dawning, but what singer's ryme,
Shall follow thy course down the ages of time?

O'er homes of the millions, o'er rich fields of toil,
Thy science shall shine as the sun shines on soil,
And Learning and Labor—fit head for fit hand—
Shall crown with twin glories our broad prairie land.

And as generations, in the grand march of time,
Shall fill the long ages with numbers sublime,
Thy portals shall throng with the lowly and great
Thy Science-crowned children shall bless all the State.

Then hail thee! bless fountain of labor and light,
Shine on in thy glory, rise ever in might;
We greet now thy dawning; but ages to come
Must tell of the grandeur, and shout Harvest Home.

troduced Dr. Gregory.† The exercises were followed by a banquet in the dining Hall of the University. Mar. 12—Lecture by Mr. J. W. Powell. Mar. 12-13—Lectures onIntemperance and Excursion to Rocky Mountains by J. C. Stoughton. Mar. 15—First Sunday "Chapel Lecture" by Dr. Gregory. Mar.—Philomathean and Adelphic Literary societies were organized. Tuition at the University was placed at $5.00 per term—$15.00 per year.

June 5—Close of the University for the year. First Military Review. During the few days of closing exercises Professor J. A. Sewall of Normal, Professor-elect of Chemistry, delivered the first commencement address.

Aug. 5—The following appointments were announced: Prof. A. P. S. Stuart of Harvard, Professor of Chemistry, Captain S. W. Shattuck of Norwich University, Assistant Professor of Mathematics and Instructor in Military Tactics, and T. J. Burrill engaged by the Regent in April superintendent of the Urbana Graded Schools, Assistant Professor of Natural History. Aug. 12—The first catalogue of the University was issued announcing the second year of instruction would begin on the fourteenth of September. Annual expenses (room, tuition, fuel, light, washing and incidentals) $160 to $195, which amount many young men reduced to within $100 and pay this by labor during the year. The University opened with a total enrollment of eighty students.

Nov. 18—The committee on Faculty of the Board of Trustees reported the employment of Professors Stuart, Shattuck and Burrill, and also of Captain Edward Snyder as Accountant and teacher of Bookkeeping and German. The Board took up for consideration a resolution of the City Council of Chicago, promising a donation of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars for the establishment in Chicago of a Polytechnical School. The members of the Board residing in the Third Grand Division and the First Congressional District were authorized to accept the offer on behalf of the Board. The following resolution was passed: "Resolved, That we recognize it as a duty of the Board of Trustees to make this University pre-eminently a practical school of Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts, not excluding other scientific and classical studies." A resolution calling for the admission of women to the University was referred to the next meeting for action.

Dec. 19—Announcement of the "First Annual Course of Agricultural Lectures and Discussions." The course was to start on the twelfth of January and to continue for eight days. Publication of the "Recommended Courses of Study," for the use of entering students.

Mar. 10, 1869—The annual report of the regent included a statement that 200-300 students would have been present at the opening of the University if they had not been diverted by the "mischievous assaults" circulated over the state and that †The following is quoted from his inaugural address of March 11, 1868:

"We shall effect the more formal and more perfect union of labor and learning. These two will be married in indissoluble bonds at our altars. The skilled hand and the thinking brain will be found compatible members of the same body. Science, leaving its seat in the clouds and coming down to work with men in shop and field, will find not only a new stimulus for its studies, but better and clearer light for its investigations and surer tests for its truths. And labor, grown scientific, will mount to richer products as well as easier processes. Thus, these two, Thought and Work, which God designed to go together, will no longer remain asunder. . . . Labor itself will be elevated to honor. . . . Labor will be made more productive. . . . Our national power and perpetuity will be greatly promoted. . . . But there remains a grander and a broader triumph than all these. If we succeed, we shall demonstrate the practicability and point out the path of universal education. . . . Let us but demonstrate that the highest culture is compatible with the active pursuit of industry, and that the richest learning will pay in a corn field or a carpenter's shop, and we have made universal education not only a possible possession, but a fated necessity of the race. Prove that education in its highest form will 'pay,' and you have made for it the market of the world."

the students had worked on the farm two hours a day for five days a week in the Spring, and one hour a day during the Fall.‡ Military Drill an hour a day for three days a week was continued. Dr. Gregory was re-elected Regent, Bunn Treasurer, Flagg Corresponding Secretary, and Bliss Recording Secretary. The Board adopted a resolution directed to the Governor recommending that the number of members of the Board be cut down and that there should henceforth be one member from each Congressional district. It was resolved to admit women students "as soon as means are at our command to furnish proper buildings for the purpose."

July 7—Prof. Wm. M. Baker was elected as Regent pro tem. during the absence of the Regent in Europe. One thousand dollars was appropriated for a greenhouse. Professor S. W. Robinson was employed as Professor of Mechanical Engineering.

1869-70

Feb., 1870—Department of Mechanical Engineering created.

Mar.—The Board continued to discuss the question of admission of women and voted to admit them "as soon as buildings are provided."

Aug. 25—It was finally decided, by a vote of five to four, to admit women to the University.

W. F. Bliss, Professor of Agriculture and Recording Secretary, resigned, and Professor Snyder was elected Recording Secretary.

Sept. 20, 1870—Visit of the committee appointed by the various agricultural societies of the state to investigate Illinois Industrial University at a time when the Legislature and the people of the state were rather extensively criticising the University for being a classical school. It found that the University was not a "purely classical school for the training of men for the learned professions."*

1870-1

Sept. 3, 1870—Adoption of Student Government. The legislative body consisted of a General Assembly elected by vote of the students. The judicial department was

*It reported that:

"We found 196 male students in attendance; . . . 14 young ladies. . . . About 50 of the students present were in the agricultural and horticultural departments, 54 in mechanical and civil engineering, 65 in chemistry, 15 in comparative anatomy, 138 in mathematics, 23 in military tactics, 50 in the commercial department, 92 in English, 63 in German, 26 in French, and 20 in Latin; none in Greek. From this statement it appears that only one-tenth of the students are studying the classics at all; and inasmuch as each student pursues three studies, only one-thirtieth of the working force of the institution is expended upon the ancient languages, whereas in an ordinary college, from half to two-thirds of the working force would be so expended.

"We were further assured by the acting Regent that it is the full purpose of the faculty to fulfill all laws enacted for the government of the institution, and to meet the requirements of the industrial classes by making it, in the true sense of the word, an industrial school in contradistiction to the ordinary colleges and professional schools of the country."

‡Article in Prairie Farmer Aug., 1868, says:

"The manual labor system worked beyond all hope. Each student if physically able, worked two hours a day for five days of each week, and many from choice, worked extra time. Several, who at the outset, determined to shirk this part of their duty, became convinced of its beneficial influences and were afterwards among the best workers. It sensibly promoted the health of the students, and several who boarded themselves, paid their way entirely by their labor. A very few were found who were constitutionally lazy and some were occasionally boyish; but in the main the work was done manfully and with great enthusiasm even. A large amount of valuable work was accomplished, and at a less expense than could have been done by ordinary laborers. Fences were erected around the college grounds and well painted. Plank sidewalks were laid. The ornamental walks and drives through the grounds were excavated and filled with brick-bats, etc. Grass verges or borders were laid; a line of forest trees were planted around the entire University square of about 15 acres; and about 500 evergreens, besides large numbers of flowering plants and shrubs, were planted in the grounds; besides all the work done on the garden and farm. The term has left monuments of achievements which will abide for centuries to come.

a Council of five, chosen from the General Assembly. And the Executive department consisted of a President and Vice President of the Government, an Adjutant for each building, and Hall Sergeants.

Feb. 24, 1871—First building appropriation for the University introduced into the Legislature. It provided for one hundred thousand dollars a year for two years for a main building and twelve thousand five hundred dollars a year for two years for a mechanical engineering building, besides twenty-five thousand a year for running expenses, apparatus, etc. This bill as passed by the Legislature, March 13, 1871, provided $75,000 for a building to cost not more than $150,000; $75,000 more was to be appropriated at an adjourned session. This was not done and the building was completed at the expense of University funds.

Feb. 28.—Scientific Association organized.

Mar. 7—The Regent reported twenty-two women in attendance. Dr. Gregory was re-elected. A site for the new main hall was adopted. Van Osdel of Chicago was to be the architect. Library numbered 5,000 vols.

June 4-7—Closing exercises. Address by President Erastus O'Haven, D.D.

Aug. 30—The executive committee of the Board of Trustees voted to allow the Regent to use one recitation room for a preparatory department. Contracts for the two new buildings were let, and the site of the Mechanical Engineering Hall (old woodshop) was adopted. Don Carlos Taft was appointed Professor of Geology and Zoology. He had begun teaching in April. Aug. 24—A convention of "friends of Agriculture and Polytechnic Education," held in Chicago, appointed a committee of one from each state in which was located a college founded on the National Land Grant, to petition Congress to establish Agricultural Experiment Stations at these colleges. Dr. Gregory was President of the Convention and appointed Secretary Flagg as Committeeman from Illinois. A circular to Illinois Congressmen was accordingly issued in November.

Sept. 13, 1871—Drill Hall and Mechanical Shops opened. On the same day the cornerstone of University Hall was laid. Hon. Newton Bateman delivered the principal address.

October 4—Organization of the Alethenai Literary Society by women of the University.

Oct. 8—The Chicago fire occurred during this month. One hundred and fifty-seven students were sent from the Military to assist in keeping order in the city during and after the fire.

Nov.—The Student, the first publication by the students of the University appeared. Published monthly.

Mar. 1872—The Trustees requested the Legislature to appropriate money to finish University Hall. Boarding Hall for women established under the auspices of the University.

April 12—The Legislature adjourned without appropriating money to finish University Hall, so the Executive committee of the Board of Trustees voted to sell Champaign County Bonds, held by the Board, to secure the necessary funds.

June 6—First commencement graduates were: John J. Davis of Freeport, Willis A. Reiss of Belleville, Alonzo L. Whitcomb of Urbana, Stephen A. Reynolds of Belvidere, James N. Mathews of Mason, Charles W. Rolfe of Montgomery, Alfred M. Flagg of Rochelle.

Addresses were delivered by Dr. Mathews, and Dr. Edwards, President of Normal University. The University Band furnished music for the first time.

1872-3

Feb.—Organization of the Young Men's Christian Association at the University. Feb. 25—Organization of the Agricultural Society.

Mar. 11—Dr. Gregory re-elected Regent, relieved from teaching, and given a leave of absence until fall to enable him to take a European trip. Professor Shattuck appointed Regent pro tem. N. C. Ricker granted a certificate and appointed Instructor in Architecture for 1873-4.

May 7—Adoption of a law providing that the Board of Trustees should henceforth consist of nine members appointed by the Governor, three from each grand judicial division of the State.

June 2-5—Commencement. Address delivered by Hon. Andrew D. White, President of Cornell University. June 4—Passage by the Legislature of an appropriation to finish University Hall. June 5—Alumni Association of the University organized.

July 10—Meeting of the newly organized Board. Passage by the Board of a Resolution declaring that Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts were the primary studies of the institution, all others being secondary.

1873-4

Sept.—Name of The Student changed to The Illini. Departments of the University now recognized were: (1) Agriculture; (2) Polytechnic; (3) Military; (4) Chemistry and Natural Science; (5) Trade and Commerce; (6) General Science and Literature.

Dec. 10—Dedication of University Hall. Dec. 19—Dedication of Adelphic Hall in University Hall. Address by Dr. Gregory.

Mar. 7, 1874—Dedication of Philomathean Hall. Address by Dr. Gregory. Mar. 11—Celebration of Anniversary day. Address by Professor T. J. Burrill. Failure of Legislature to pass any bill of appropriations for the University called for the discussion of methods of retrenchment by the Board.

June 9—N. C. Ricker appointed Assistant Professor of Architecture.

1874-5

Sept. 21—First issue of the University Reporter, a publication of four small pages. Its purpose was ostensibly to arouse interest in Student Government and to advocate the establishment of a university press. Its real object was to elect a certain ticket in the student campaign. There were three tickets in the field: "Reform," "Law and Order," and "Reporter." Probably largely as a result of the issue of three numbers of this paper almost every one of the thirty candidates on the "Reporter" ticket was elected.

Nov. 26—First annual banquet of the Telegraphic Association, composed of students bent upon mastering the new art of telegraphy.

Dec. 4—Union meeting of Philomathean, Adelphic, Scientific, and Alethenai Societies.

Mar. 4, 1875—Banquet of Senior Military Class. Professor Manley Miles of Michigan, elected Professor of Agriculture and Instructor in Agricultural Chemistry, at a salary of $5,000.00 a year.

June 8—N. C. Ricker advanced to full professorship. First annual meeting of Alumni. I. O. Baker appointed instructor (had taught since Sept. 23, 1874).

1875-6

Oct. 28, 1875—Second annual Oratorical Contest between the colleges of Illinois held at Jacksonville. The contestants were representatives of Knox, Northwestern, Illinois Wesleyan, Chicago University, Shurtleff, Monmouth, Illinois College, and Illinois Industrial University. First Prize was won by J. C. Lewis of the Industrial University, second prize by J. Otis Humphrey of Shurtleff.

Mar. 15, 1876—Board of Trustees decided to establish a Preparatory department. March 11—Anniversary Day. Address by Dr. Gregory.

June 7—Dr. Gregory presented his resignation of the regency. June 6—Discovery that a chapter of a fraternity had secretly existed for some time in the University led to a recommendation by the Regent and the adoption by the Board of this resolution: "Resolved, That the Board condemns the formation and perpetuation of secret societies in the University as detrimental to the scheme of self-government attempted by the students; and that we trust a due regard to the best interests of the institution will induce our students to disband and discountenance such organizations." The Young Men's Christian Association was granted the use of a room in University Hall. All University instructors were given notice of a prospective cut of ten per cent. in salaries, caused by the Board's lack of funds.

Sept. 12—Dr. Gregory decides to withdraw his resignation and remain.

Mar. 13, 1877—School of Art and Design established. Dr. Gregory re-elected Regent. Professor Ricker's plans for a Chemistry Building accepted. A reduction of ten per cent of all salaries decreed by the Board of Trustees.

1877-8

Sept. 11—Preparatory students required to drill. Chemical laboratory located. All bids for the building rejected. Major Dinwiddie, the first army Commandant, took charge of the military department.

Oct. 18—Inter-collegiate contest at Monmouth, won by Knox, Northwestern second, Illinois Industrial University third.

Feb. 13, 1878—Organization of "Temperance Union" by University students.

Mar. 12—Illini advocated inter-collegiate baseball contests. Seniors decide to leave clock for west tower of Main Hall as class memorial. Rules passed by the Board governing the granting of degrees. Voted to give diplomas to graduates, charging a fee of $5 therefor. President Gregory appointed commissioner to Paris Exposition by the Governor and granted leave of absence to attend. Three hundred Springefild rifles received for cadets.

May 31—Entertainment by Musical Classes and Singers of the University. Petition to the Legislature signed by members of the classes of 1872-7, inclusive asking it to empower the Trustees of the University to grant degrees. Petition granted. Annual contest of Illinois Industrial University Association. Summer School of Mechanic Arts held in Chicago from June 24 to August 15.

1878-9

Sept.—Office of "commander of battalion" abolished and "military professor" given charge of "military classes and drill organizations."

Dec.—Illini advocated adoption of University colors.

Sept.—S. H. Peabody appointed Professor of Mechanical Engineering.

Jan. 16—Organization of the State Natural History Society at Normal. Professor T. J. Burrill, Vice President, Professor S. A. Forbes of Normal University, Secretary.

Mar. 11—Committee of Board of Trustees reported its approval of Woman's Hall, but no money with which to build it. Dr. Gregory re-elected Regent and directed by the Board of Trustees to submit the Constitution and By-Laws of the Student Organization for self-government to the Attorney General for an opinion as to whether they conflicted with State Laws.

May—University received gold medal for exhibit at Paris exposition.

June 5—I. O. Baker made Assistant Professor of Civil Engineering.

1879-80

Oct. 2—Sixth Annual Contest of Illinois Inter-Collegiate Oratorical Association held in the University Chapel. First inter-collegiate Baseball game. Score, Illinois Industrial University 12, Illinois College 5 .

Dec. 1—Professor Peabody resigned. Trustees decided to employ an Instructor in Free-Hand Drawing.

Jan. 27-30—Agricultural Institute held at the University.

Feb.—Natural History Society organized.

Mar. 9—Cadet uniforms changed from gray to blue; seniors and juniors released from drill. Military departments reorganized on account of student troubles during the past term. Decision to close Preparatory Department after June, 1881.

June 7—Closing Concert of Musical Department.

June 8—Dr. Gregory resigned; the resignation to take effect September first. Professor S. H. Peabody reappointed to the chair of Mechanical Engineering and appointed Regent pro tempore. Old Dormitory Building decreed unfit for occupancy.

1880-1

Oct. 2—Baseball: Illinois Industrial University 14, Knox 8.

Dec. 14—U. S. Signal Station established.

Feb. 24—Publication of "The Vindicator," of four pages as a result of class troubles. It died after a second issue on the fifth of March.

Mar. 9—Action of previous year in regard to Preparatory Department rescinded. Acting Regent Peabody made Regent. Old Dormitory offered for sale. Legislature appropriated money to help out the endowment fund.

May 31—Kappa Kappa chapter of Sigmi Chi organized. Competitive drill of battalion.

June—Regent reported to Board the formation of a new secret society and requested action. Board resolved that the Regent and faculty should take steps to secure the abandonment of the society. Petition to re-establish School of Domestic Science refused.

1881-2

Dec. 13—Regent reported to the board that the faculty had passed rules providing that no student could enter the University until he had pledged himself not to join a fraternity; and that no student should graduate until he had certified that he had not belonged to any while in the University. The adoption of these rules had disclosed the existence of four societies, whose members petitioned the faculty to rescind these rules. The faculty turned the petitions over to the Board, which recommended that the request be refused. All University dues remitted to "Charles Montezuma, an Indian of the Apache nation," during his course through the University.

Jan. 9—Banquet of Sigma Chi fraternity.

Mar.—First issue of Sophograph, college annual, published by the sophomores. March 14—Petitions from students requesting the Board of Trustees to allow fraternities to enter the University refused.

June—Decided to build an Astronomical Observatory. Regent directed to take charge of the Illini property. Scientific Association disbanded. Professors Henry A. Weber and Melville A. Scovell discharged for having patented private rights on the results of their investigations and experiments in the manufacture of sugar and glucose, conducted under the patronage of the University and at the expense of the State. Professor Taft was given a year's leave of absence, and his chair declared vacant.

1882-3

Sept.—Board voted to employ Instructor in Elocution. Wm. McMurtrie appeared as Professor of Chemistry. Observatory opened. Seniors adopted custom of wearing black silk hats and juniors white plug.

Oct.—Illinois joined "State Baseball Association." Illinois Inter-Collegiate Oratorical Contest at Chicago—I. I. U. third.

Jan. 8—Civil Engineering Club organized.

Mar.—Appropriation for a national flag for the battalion.

May 19—First Field Day at the University.

June—Board of Trustees voted to abolish student government.
